OUR COVER

The fantastic photography of Tom Coughlin not only returns to our cover but is featured in two of our major portfolio presentations this issue. Chicagoan Ken Hermann is the featured model that we're sure you agree is one of Tom's best subjects in the growing line of male models for Nude art photography. Ken gives us a perspective look at what we call the "Wet and Western" look. (as opposed to Levi and Leather).

OPENERS

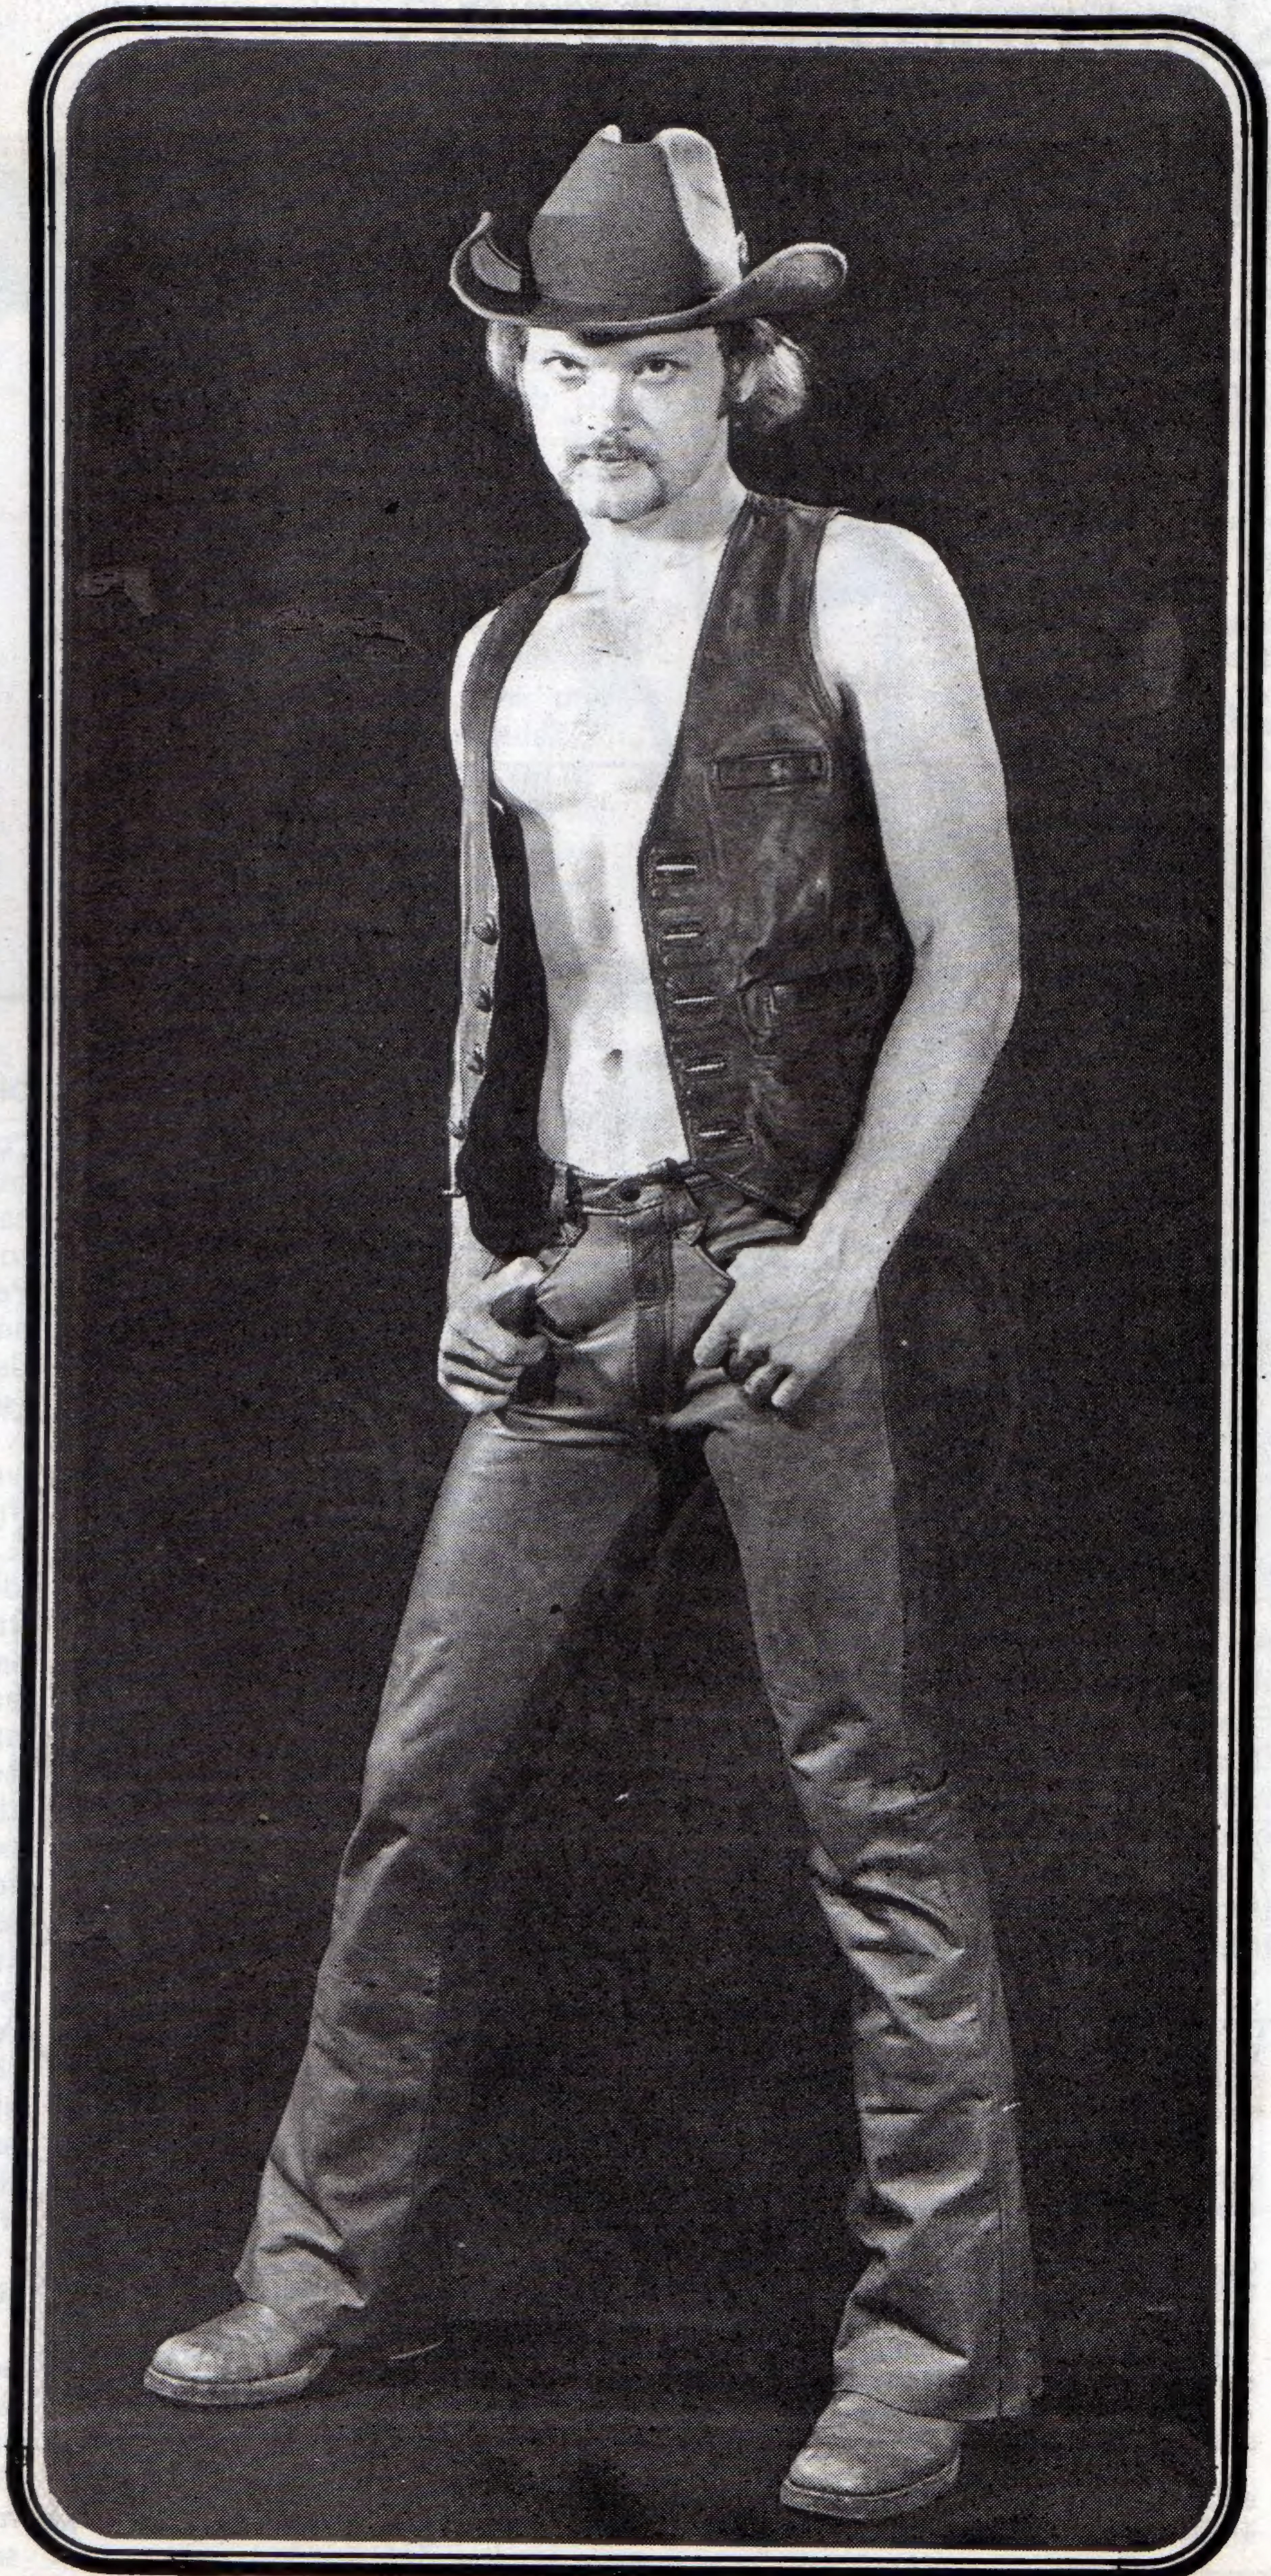

I guess we really caught you with our cover last issue because we must boast a "sold out" position not having ample quantities on hand for requested out of town shipment.

The cover admittedly did not draw as much comment as the full frame reproduction of our well built male cover model. This issue, rather than expose Ken on this page, we thought we would give you a look at Ken attired in brown leather vest and pants and western hat. Now before you read on, look at the cover and turn directly to page 23 for the full frame photo that is the first page of our centerspread portfolio.

Ken can be seen again with his "wet look" in conjunction with Don Eric's body building article beginning on page 00. Between a practical essay on your body and the photo poses, we feel you yourself will want to flex your muscles. Ken, by the way, is active in "working out" and feels that in a few years he will be ready for competition with the best. Far be it from us to say that he isn't ready now. We will follow his body building efforts with interest and bring you "updates" on his progress with Tom Coughlin's photographic cooperation.

The call for your continued support and comments will go out again as we continue to mold the Journal into the male gay publication that you find informative and enjoyable. As you noticed we said "male gay publication." It's not that we don't welcome our lady (or I better say) women readers, but after almost a year of publishing GCNews it seems no matter what we do we can't make the women happy. What we meant as a bit of

No, what is pictured here is not a gymnastic event, but a view of the August White Party preview of the new entertainment complex called Center Stage. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves and it appears that one young man flipped over the hospitality of Chuck Renslow and Associates. Center Stage will be the name of the disco that will dominate what was the second floor balconyed theatre of the North Side Auditorium at 3730 North Clark Street. The complex will still be the home of Victory Garden's Theatre on the third floor and a cabaret lounge will open in the basement. The ground floor street front will bring Male Hide Leathers to the North Lake View area of Chicago.

Maybe we are becoming controversial for we also drew criticism from the editor of Blueboy with my Lifestyle column comments on their distribution pact. His letter of detailed protest can be found in the letters section (Editorial pages). In answer, yes our artist did borrow and modify some Blueboy art, however in checking, it was cut-out for the copy and not ripped-off. Remember, imitation is the most sincere form of flattery. As far as the "Hustler" part, the word has many applications. Some of my best friends are hustlers of different varieties and I respect them all. I still have the right to contend that the "S&M" application as published in Blueboy last year was gross. The photos for those that I remember were depicting bloody emasculation and that I contend is not the context of gay so-called "S&M".

Back to the pages ahead, in addition to the aforementioned, there is an expansion in some of our feature article reports plus an expanded Directory section to help you in your midwest travels. But first a look at some of the top news developments:

WICHITA GAY RIGHTS PASSES 2ND VOTE (9/27/77)

On September 6th the Wichita, Kansas City Commission passed a gay rights bill on a 3-2 vote. The bill would prohibit discrimination on the basis of sexual or affectional preference and marital status in the areas of employment, housing and public accommodations. The vote was taken immediately following nine hours of public hearings and would require the Commission to vote again on the measure September 13th to become law.

At the request of Commissioner Jack Shanahan, the second vote was delayed until Tuesday the 27th so that he could investigate additional legal opinions regarding the proposal. Shanahan, who had cast the deciding vote for initial passage, is reported by the Wichita Eagle/Beacon to be concerned about the employment application regarding homosexual teachers.

Conservative groups, according to the National Gay Task Force, had threatened to circulate a referendum petition similar to the one that reversed the Dade County ordinance in June.

Such action, premature before passage of the Wichita legislation, would not be possible before August, 1978. However, in the current attack by the local conservatives, the Eagle/Beacon told GCNews there is a possibility that a recall election petition will be circulated against the Commissioners voting approval of the rights bill.

In addition to Shanahan, Commissioners Connie Peters and Garry Porter have come under attack by opponents concerned mainly about the proposed laws inclusion of those in the teaching profession or other areas effecting professional contact with the city's youth.

Wichita has thus become the 37th U.S. community to take action on some form of gay-rights legislation, and the fourth community to do so this year. The others are Tucson, Arizona, Iowa City, Iowa, Champaign, Illinois and Dade County, Florida. The first three who passed the legislation have done so without any counter action by anti-gay forces. Two Canadian cities also have enacted such protections, while three other U.S. cities and the state of Pennsylvania have anti-discrimination that covers only those employed by

KKK SEEKS EXECUTION OF ALL HOMOSEXUALS

A transcript of a recorded message on the Ku Klux Klan bookstore's unlisted phone in Pasadena, Texas, a suburb of Houston, disclosed that the KKK urges the "execution of all homosexuals." The message of August 24th was reported by the gay newspaper The Star as saying, "The Ku Klux Klan is not embarrassed to admit that we endorse and seek the execution of all homosexuals."

The KKK message came just five days after KPFT-FM radio in Houston devoted an entire day to a gay radio marathon. (see "Media" report in News Notes section)

Referring to the "law of God" as quoted in Leviticus 20:13, the Klan called for the death penalty rather than following "many church people" that have been "duped by their brain-washed, pink-panty preachers into believing that we should merely pray for the homosexual."

"Not only have we seen the establishment of homosexual churches in our once-unblemished land," the message said, "but at least two major denominations have actually ordained homosexuals into the ministry." The first they referred to was the United Church of Christ which "ordained a male preaching queer five years ago." They also called attention to the Episcopal Church's ordination of a lesbian.

The KKK attack continued by saying, "For while educators, psychiatrists, doctors and judges try to decide what to do with all these perverts, and how best to white-wash their degenerate actions, one would think that at least the church the government. In Pennsylvania, this action was accomplished by executive order rather than by the state legislature.

Increased interest in human rights was in the spotlight along with some would have the right answers." Stating that most churches "denounce to some degree or other the actions of the fairies, they are still puzzled as to what to do with them."

The KKK's call to kill continued explaining that they do not have to "rely on the feelings or thought of man, nor do we need to experience a dialogue with some Jewish psychiatrist or rabbi who is mentally warped anyway." They contend that all they have to rely on is their interpretation of "the age-proven and reliable law of God."

The message concluded saying: "It is not our intention to put this matter up to discussion or debate the matter, or start a dialogue with a committee of queers as to their rights of sexual freedom. The law of God states the death penalty for homosexuals, and when God's laws are again enforced, the death penalty is what it will be."

included entertainment by Bette Midler, Charles Nelson Reiley and Lily Tomlin. Others present were Paul Newman, Olivia Newton-John, Valerie Harper and Robert Blake.

The net result was the $250,000 raised in the "Star Spangled Night for Rights" and an outburst on stage from Richard Pryor. The black comic started with a satire on gays apparently not too well received. Feeling his attempt at humor had laid an egg, Pryor turned to an attack by saying, "I wanted to test you to your soul.... This is an evening for human rights and I am a human being. I wanted to come here and tell you to kiss my" Then pausing in the silenced structure he turned and lifted his coat and repeated, "Kiss my happy, rich, black ass."

Pryor, recently at odds with NBC over editing of his nude skit (actually a flesh-colored loin cloth), has threatened to cancel his contract because the network "stifled his creativity." Burt Sugarman, Pryor's NBC producer, told reporters the next day following the Hollywood Bowl outbursts that Richard had nothing more to say on the subject. Softening the anti-gay remarks, Sugarman said, "It (Pryor's remarks) was not anti-gay, it was a race thing."

REV. PERRY'S FAST RAISES $1000,000

The Reverend Troy D. Perry, Founder and General Moderator of the Universal Fellowship of Metropolitan

REV. TROY PERRY

Community Churches, concluded his "fast for human rights" on September 21st after raising $100,000. The fast, which began on September 6th, was publicly announced four days later on the steps of the Federal Building in Los Angeles. At that time Perry stated that he would "fast to death if necessary, to educate the American public to the fact that gay men and women are oppressed, are a minority, and that bigots like John Briggs and Anita Bryant would like to make us scapegoats for what they perceive as the ills of society."

The fast on water and one vitamin pill a day continued until the goal was raised in an effort to fight the initiative that has been started by State Senator John Briggs (R-Fullerton). Sen Briggs tried unsuccessfully to have a bill passed that would call for the firing of all open homosexuals as teachers in the state. As a result of the state house defeat, the ambitious Senator sponsored a petition drive to put the proposal before the voters as a referendum.

In a press release during the fast, Rev. Richard R. Mickley said, "John Briggs would probably be unsuccessful in any attempt to get the thoughtful members of the California legislature to pass such an oppressive bill. John Briggs might just possibly get enough support from 'party line fundamentalists', to pull off a popular rejection of human rights in a state-wide referendum."

The release continued to say that "John Briggs is the unknown former state assemblyman who is trying to ride into the governor's mansion on Anita Bryant's skirt-tails." Briggs was one of the out of staters that flew to Dade County to join the singer's successful campaign to repeal the Dade County gay rights ordinance. In a Los Angeles Times editorial, the charge of using the issues to "gain recognition" was echoed. The editorial pointed out that the senator did nothing in ten years in the State Assembly to make his name known and that this is now his way of getting publicity.

Addressing the issue of homosexuality in relation to the nation's youth, Rev. Perry made a personal appeal to President Jimmy Carter. As one of the gay leaders that met in the White House last March, Rev. Perry asked the President to appoint a commission to study and report on the facts about sexual abuse of children. "I know the report of this commission will clear up for once and for all the blatant lie of the myth of the gay child-molester stereotype and show the ridiculousness of the Briggs proposal," he said.

The fast was concluded on the 16th day following one large $20,000 donation from a woman in Kansas. In a report issued on the 15th day of the fast, September 20th, Rev. Perry had lost about 20 pounds, but was reported in good health, even though he was weak. A physician who remained in consultation with the UCLA Medical Center metabolism specialists had checked him every two days during the ordeal. Rev. Perry spent most of his time, day and night, on the steps of the Federal Building except for the times he was required by church business to be away.

FATHER MCNEIL SILENCED BY ROME

Fr. John McNeil, S.J., noted Roman Catholic moral theologian and author of "The Church and the Homosexual" was once again ordered to silence by Church authorities in Rome. The announcement was made public September 2nd, the opening day of the bi-annual international convention for Dignity, the organization of gay and concerned Catholics.

Father McNeil, scheduled to speak at the third meeting held in Chicago, received the order through his superior, the Rev. Eamon Taylor, S.J., New York Provincial of the Society of Jesus. The order to silence, paralleling a similar 1973 command which had delayed publication of McNeil's book for two years, came from Franjo Cardinal Seper, head of the Church's Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith in Rome, through the Jesuit Superior General, the Rev. Pedro Arrupe, S.J.

McNeil was told that he is not to speak publicly on homosexuality or sexual ethics and that the "Imprimi Potest" (a designation from the Church that a book can be printed, which McNeil had worked for two years to obtain) is to be removed from all future editions of the book. The book in question is now in its third printing, and had already been acclaimed as an important, scholarly statement of alternatives to the traditional Church teaching.

Father McNeil expressed disappointment with the order, but also emphasized that it was not a condemnation of his book nor a demand that he change his position. In his letter explaining his absence from the Dignity conference, the priest stated, "The 'Imprimi Potest' was granted for the purpose of making the book available to a limited audience of scholars and peers for scholarly debate. However, the book has been promoted and distributed on a widespread basis. Its publication so soon after the release of the Vatican Document, the 'Declaration on Certain Questions Concerning Sexual Ethics', was considered damaging to a respectful attitude toward that document." Father McNeil concluded, "Because of the publicity and promotion concerning my book, false hopes have been raised in the gay community that the Church would change its position in this regard."

In a statement issued from the Convention Delegates, the group hailed John McNeil as "a modern prophet" and repudiated "the charge that John McNeil has fostered unrealistic hopes if imminent change in official church teaching on sexuality."

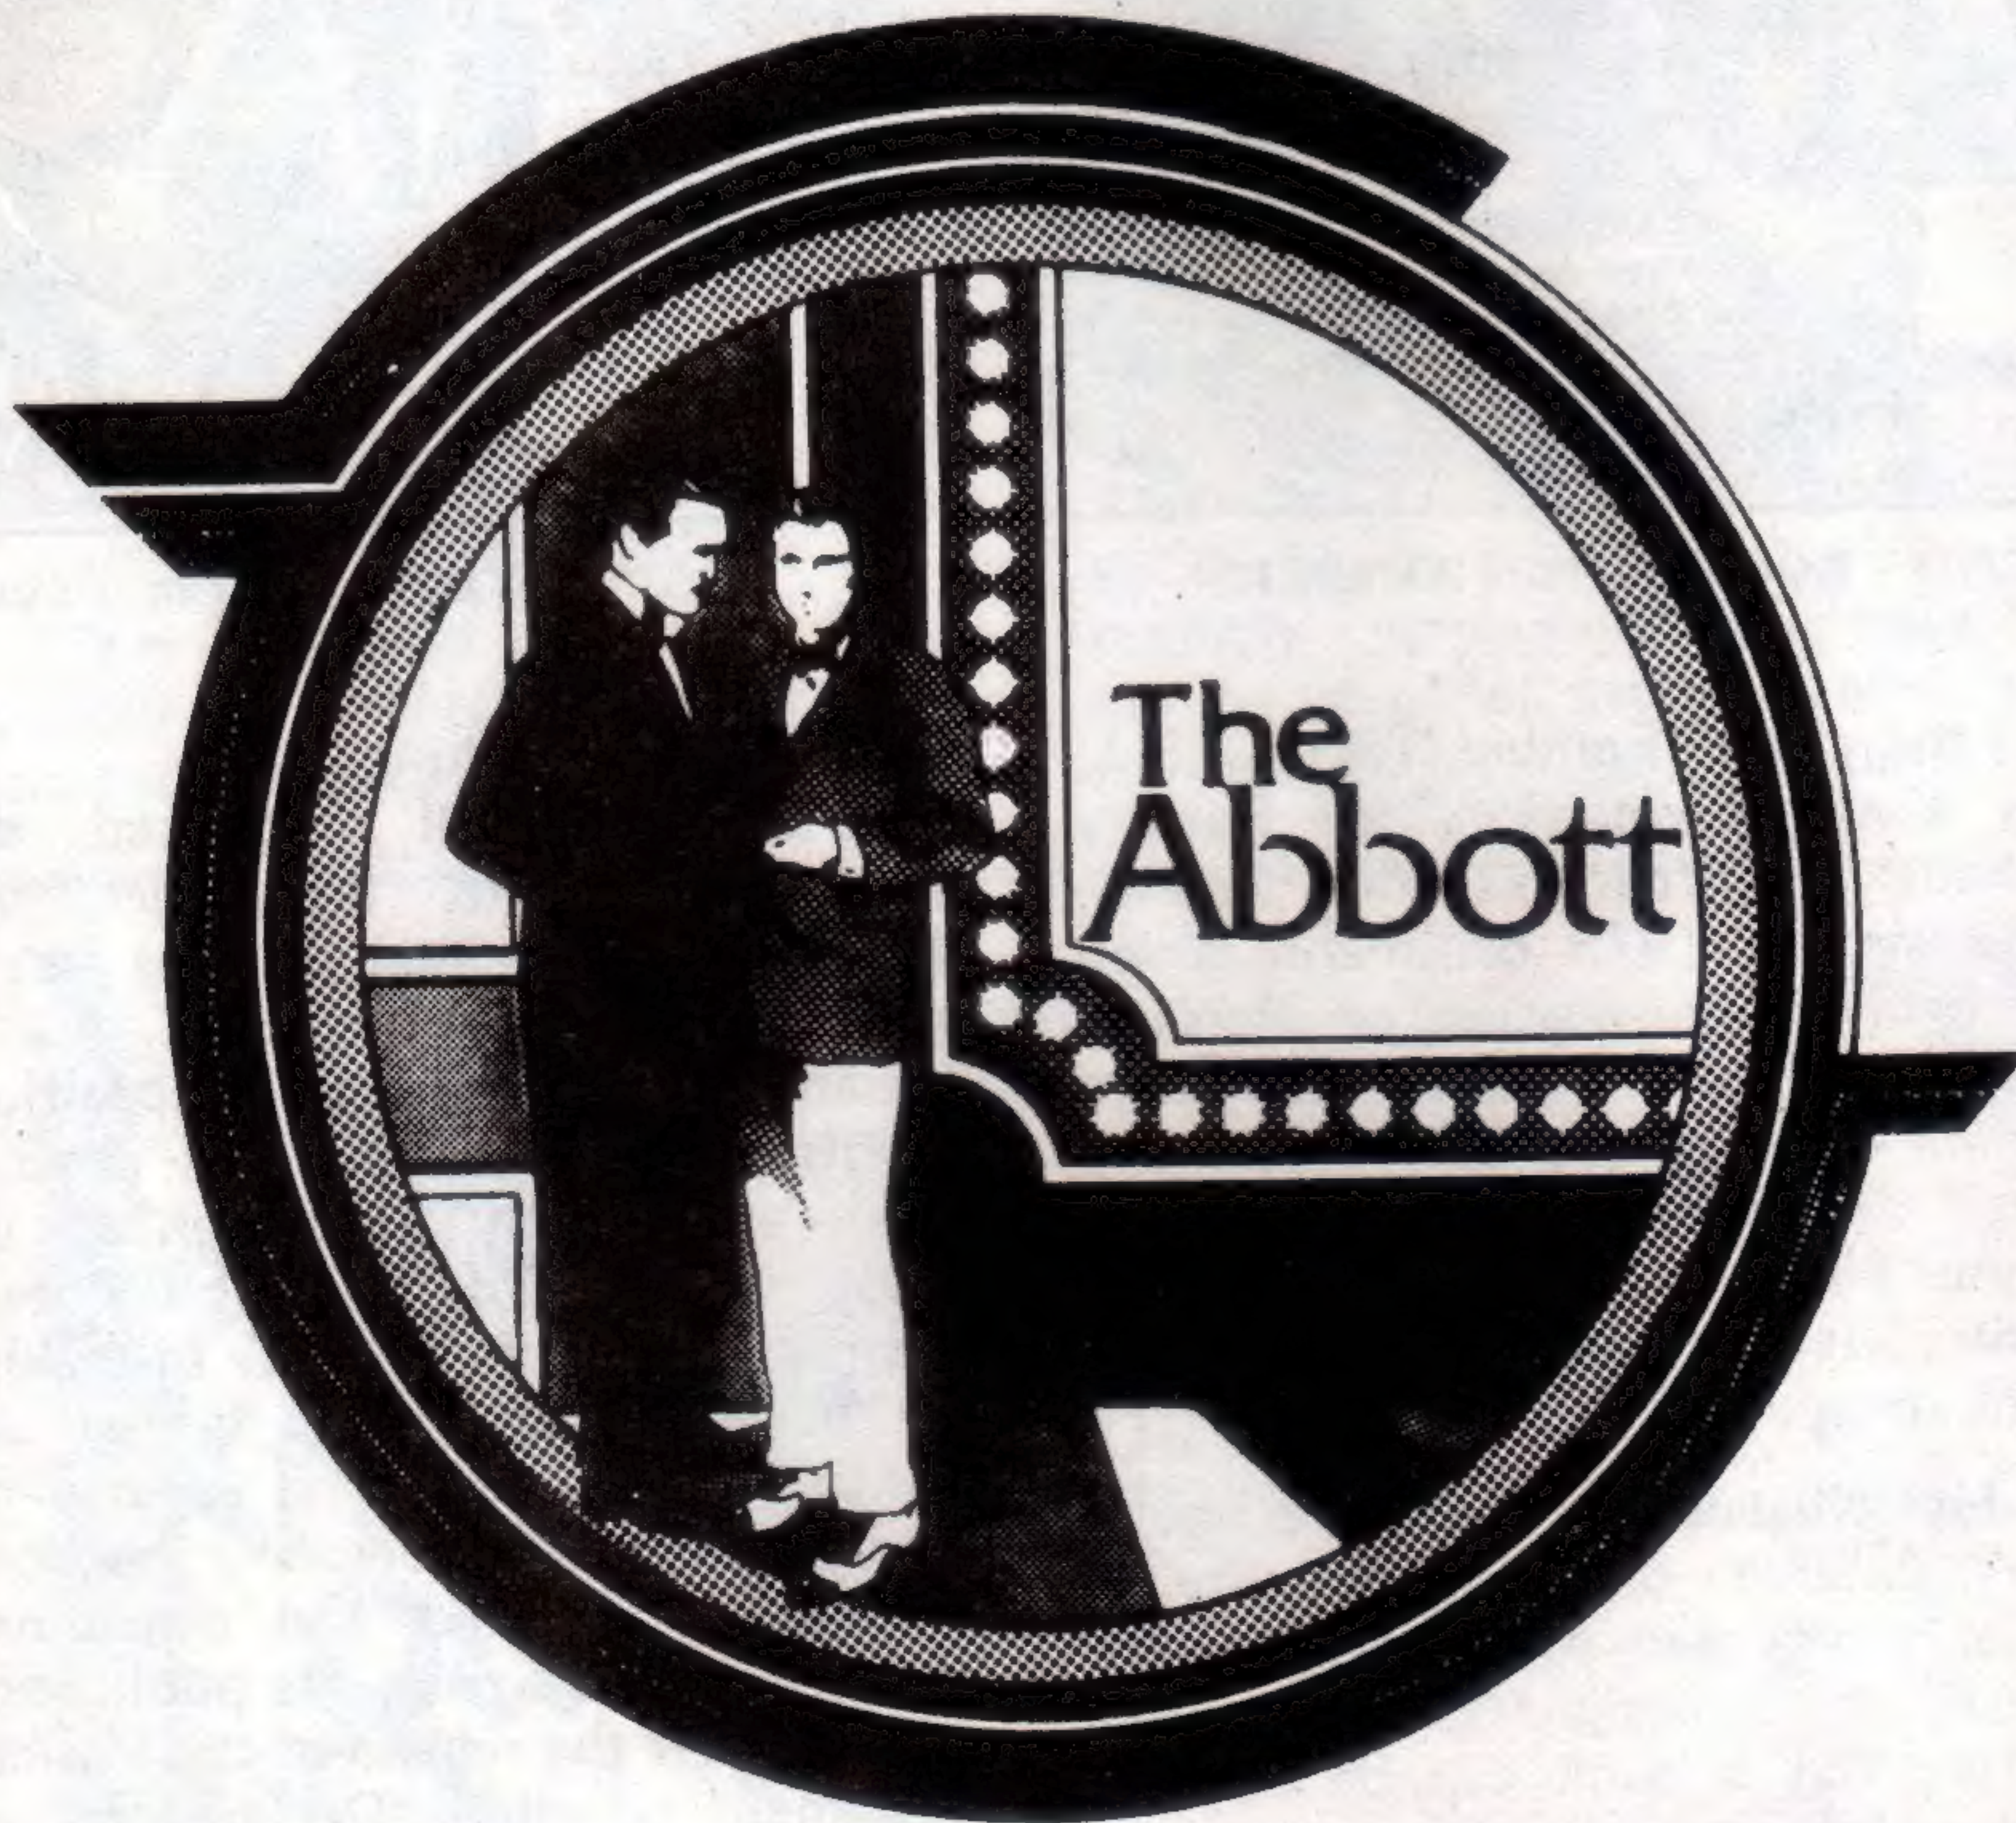

DIGNITY/CHICAGO HOSTS INTERNATIONAL MEET

Over 700 persons were drawn to the Bismark Hotel in downtown Chicago for the 3rd Biannual International Convention over the Labor Day weekend. The three day meeting included numerous workshops, convention business sessions, special masses, a Sunday night dinner-dance and a "Pub Crawl".

Mass donations, totaling over $4,000 have been earmarked for a special fund to finance the establishment of permanent National Offices. The election of new officers for the next two years saw a California slate defeat the Atlanta, Ga. group seeking the positions held by the outgoing Dignity/Boston officials. In their welcoming statements Paul Diederich, President; Hank Taylor, Treasurer, and Rev. Thomas Oddo, Secretary pointed out the growth in size and strength in the four years since their first convention in 1973. Pointing to the statistics of about 4000 members and over 70 active Chapters they said, "We have truly become a voice in the Church and in society."

The new officers elected were Walter A. Kay, President and Carla Kaesbauer, Secretary both from San Diego and Madeline Ritchie, Treasurer from San Francisco. The next meeting of the church organization will be held in San Diego, California in 1979.

Patricia Nell Warren was one of the featured speakers and held a workshop during the Dignity International Convention. Ms. Warren, author of the best sellers "Front Runner" and "Fancy Dancer" who is employed as a writer with the Reader's Digest, recently made public her homosexuality through major media interviews in New York. Questioned in regard to the gay announcement affecting her employment, Ms. Warren reported the main reaction was "that was a nice interview in the paper this morning." She told GCNews that the Digest is more concerned with an equal opportunity lawsuit filed in 1972. Acting as a spokesperson for the feminist group that initiated the suit, Ms. Warren indicated that the gay issue is subsequent to the pending outcome of one of the nation's first media equal employment litigations.

NEW TAX DEDUCTIBLE GAY GROUPS

The new rulings by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service to include some gay organizations is being viewed by many activists as a "boon" to fund-raising efforts. The first reversal of the IRS designation was made through the efforts of the National Gay Task Force and The Fund for Human Dignity (The Howard Brown Memorial Fund). Also in the past month the same status has since been granted to the Lambda Service Bureau, Inc., a Colorado Springs, Colorado social service organization.

In the case of the Colorado group, the litigation with the IRS has been pending since 1975. At first, the group was granted the desired

FOUR GOOD TIMES

BROADWAY LIMITED

3132 North Broadway, Chicago

by Gene Janowski

The following is an interview with John Melzone a 49 year old former Catholic Priest, now on the Board of Directors of Dignity. He was a Diocesan Priest in New York for 22 years before returning to Chicago and joining Dignity. He recently served as the chairman for the 3rd bi-annual Dignity International Convention held in Chicago.

Could you relate your 'coming out' and how it affected your position in the Church?

I was actually Gay before joining the Seminary. Completely closeted while in the priesthood and then out again when I left the priesthood. It was like coming out twice and the second time was harder than the first.

I saw a poster for a Gay mass being said at St. Sebastians but thought it was one of those weird type of new churches being formed so I dismissed it from my mind. You have to remember, I had my own argument with the established church that had nothing to do with the Gay issue. So I let a couple of months pass when I called the chancery office to ask if it was alright to go to this Gay mass. The only answer I could get from them was, "If I went to the mass at St. Sebastians, I would fulfill my obligation for hearing mass," which in Catholic parlance means, it's O.K. to go, but they don't say that to you.

I made two attempts to go up those front steps at St. Sebastians but changed my mind thinking all it could be was a bunch of ex-nuns who got kicked out of the convent and I pictured them making lace and playing house. In October of 1970, I went to St. Sebastians one more time. As I was walking up the steps, I saw this hunk in leather and chains standing at the church steps, and I'm looking at him and he says, "This is the place, honey, come on up." I thought, they're certainly not making alter linens or playing house if this hunk is standing there. I've never seen the man since. I don't know who he was but he was like a guardian angel in leather. When I went into the church I was very impressed. It came time for Holy Communion and for a Catholic, Holy Communion is the most moving, most tender, most intimate part of the Catholic spiritual life. Of course, being raised that I could not go to Holy Communion if I were guilty of sin, and we live in a "constant state of sin" we Gays do, I could never go to Holy Communion. So to see 50 to 60 people going to communion, I was just awed by the whole thing. All of a sudden a trick I had the night before came down the aisle and I thought, how can he go if I can't go. I mean, something is wrong someplace. So after mass I went into the confessional to talk to Father. I told him I wasn't going to go to confession but I did want to understand what was going on here.

First of all, we do believe in God. That God made us. That we are children of God. Second, God made you the way you are. You are truly Gay. There's nothing you can do about it. Forget all the latest garbage about choosing to be Gay. Third, you believe that God has a divine plan. All that God created fits into this divine plan. God created me Gay and that fits somewhere in the divine plan of the Almighty. Gayness is important. If this is true, I do have dignity, I have worth, I have merit. When I got through talking to Father, he says to me, "Your only problem, John, was your theology was 10 years ahead of its time." All I had to do was make an act of contrition, if I was sorry for the sins I was guilty of and of course, I was sorry for the sins I really believed were sins, so that problem was solved. So with that, I joined Dignity that night. I've been with them ever since.

Prior to the silencing of Fr. McNeil, what were the expected outcomes of the Dignity Convention?

We didn't expect to accomplish great things. The Church is old, it's established, and it has been that way for 2,000 years. The best you can do is chip, chip, chip and maybe a little piece might fall out but you're never going to split this status and several months later had it revoked because the organization would not agree to the premise that homosexuality was not normal or imply that it was an illness. Following an appeal of the revocation, the IRS held a hearing in July of 1976 and only this year restored Lambda's tax-deductibility status.

The IRS, in granting the two groups the deductible exemptions, in effect reverses its view that homosexuals are "sick people". However, the Internal Revenue Service has required a statement that the Fund for Human Dignity "would not advocate or actively seek to convince individuals that they should or should not be homosexuals."

Many non-profit gay organizations have been granted the simple tax exempt status that permits them to operate without paying corporate income taxes. The "tax-deductible" exemption status means that persons donating to the organization can legally "write off" their contributions from their personal income tax fillings. This status would apply only to welfare or service type organizations and not political or lobbying groups.

Prior to the new IRS decisions, only two gay organizations, The Lambda Legal Defense Fund of New York and the Whitman-Radcliffe Foundation of San Francisco, had been accepted for tax-deductible inclusion by the Federal government.

TRAVEL

MORE AMTRAK PROBLEMS

Traveling America the gay old way via Amtrak will be less convenient and more costly effective October 30th. The 13 member board of directors in Washington announced the second fare increase in six months and the fourth cut in service in two months.

A fear that the quasi-governmental corporation that runs the rails is in serious trouble is evident with the higher cost to use Amtrak from Chicago to Los Angeles for the current $115 when some of the new discount airfares are as low as $89.

North-east service was most drastically effected in the new orders with a reduction of 22 trains a day from the 120 now operating between Boston and Washington, D.C.

In the midwest, the Chicago-Milwaukee round trips were cut to 5 a day from 6 on Monday through Saturday and 7 on Sunday with a quarter fare increase to $6.25. Other increases of 25 cents will go into effect between Chicago and Champaign and the Chicago-Dubuque, Iowa run.

The action by Amtrak comes as Congress voted $45.6 million less than the $500 million that President Carter recommended for the Government's operation budget of the corporation.

The recent cut back has forced Amtrak to discontinue staffing in many areas. The most severe cut has resulted in virtually eliminating the famous "red caps".

JUDICIAL

FEMINIST DEFEATS JUDGE IN RAPE RECALL

The controversial Madison, Wisconsin judge Archie Simonson was defeated at the polls by almost 10,000 votes in a recall election that drew over 75,000 persons out to vote for the six contenders. The recall election was petitioned following Judge Simonson's easy sentence for a teenage boy on trial for rape of another student in a Madison High School. The judge had stated that the act was a normal reaction for a young man in the face of Madison's permissive climate and provocative female fashions.

Moria Krueger captured over a third of the vote to win the election for the remainder of the six-year term that expires next April. The victory by the 33 year old attorney specializing in juvenile-law practice was culminated in a city-wide celebration by the feminists and gay community.

Madison, the home of the University of Wisconsin, is the only mid-western city that has the distinction of having an openly gay alderman, Jim Yeadon, in the city council.

HOUSTON BOOKSTORES WIN PORNO ORDINANCE FIGHT

A U.S. District Court Judge declared Houston's controversial zoning ordinance against adult bookstores unconstitutional in a suit filed by nineteen adult location operators. The ordinance, originally passed by the City Council over the objection of Mayor Fred Hofheinz, was designed to prevent any adult bookstore or movie theater from operating within 2000 feet of any "church, school or hunk of marble down the middle. That's impossible. With the convention, it was to let the world know that the idea of Dignity is not because of the religion, it's the idea that you are not alone. All of a sudden you come up to a group that says to you, "The rest of us are here too, you don't have to do this battle by yourself anymore." With this convention, we knew it would be the biggest convention Dignity has had. I joined Dignity when there was 6 chapters and now there are 70. The idea was to say to Catholics, "Here we are, there is an organization that understands, an organization that can help."

The second ambition we had here in Chicago, was that Dignity would never forget Chicago. Hometown pride. The whole point was an act of civil Gay rights. We were somebody. We went down to the bureau of conventions. Our convention was recognized by the City of Chicago. The two years since we started to plan the convention, Anita came on the scene. The Gay rights movement drew civil rights attention when Matlovich came out. The whole world changed. Not knowing that this was going to take place we could not prepare for it but when it did come, we felt that our convention here, was not just for Dignity but for the whole Gay community, in Chicago, saying to the whole world, "Here we are, we are public, we are downtown at a very first class hotel, we are registered with the city of Chicago, and we're about as out as you can get, if anyone needs us, just come to us. Here we are."

All groups have their frustrations. What are Dignity's within the Gay community and from the outside?

Our biggest frustration is not with the rest of the Gay community. There is an anti-church element within the Gay community. There is a group of Gays who are anti-church, any church. We do get frustrated with the implication that at times we're do-gooders or goody-goodys. But the biggest frustrations are the bishops of the United States. The bishop to a Catholic is the final authority in the Catholic church. Even more so than the Pope because the Pope is a mystic sort of thing because he's way up there, in Rome, and we're over here in Chicago, and Cardinal Cody is much closer. They say one thing in private, they encourage you, they don't put you down, they let you continue with the work you're doing, then publicly they get up in a bishops meeting and deny everything that they in fact are doing. Dignity could not exist in 70 chapters without some encouragement from the local clergy and local bishop. Yet, at the bishops conferences we had here in May, they got up and denied anything to do with the homosexual.

What do you expect from the Church?

Granting the authority of the church through the centuries, when you read the New Testament, over and over again, nowhere in the four Gospels, which are supposed to be recorded words of Jesus Christ, is the word homosexual ever used in any sense, form, size, shape or imagination. So all the quotes are always from the Old Testament. The founder of Christianity has nothing to say on this subject, and everyone ignores the fact that the gospels don't mention that work.

When the reformation came, they withdrew within a wall and refused to admit that protestants existed. It took them 400 years to accept the fact that there are protestants and they are not going to go away. It's only been in the last 10 to 15 years that Pope John, even acknowledged that there are protestants, we should be nice to them. So when you ask, "What do we expect from the Church?" Not much.

I've heard some criticism that women don't participate enough in Dignity. Is this criticism justified?

The criticism is not justified, the fact is true. There are not too many women in Dignity. There are several chapters where there are more females than males, but the majority of Dignity is male. And we do not know why. Because we have tried. Everything in the world has been tried to bring the women into Dignity. We are not successful. Here in Chicago we have elected a woman to the board of directors for three consecutive years running. Women participate by serving mass, by doing the reading, and a woman for the last two years has been head of our liturgy committee. Yet, we do not bring that many women into Dignity. Is it, you wonder, a hatred against the Catholic Church that the women may feel and they carry it over into Gay society. If the criticism were labeled that women were held back by Dignity, then it is not justified.

Could it be subconscious sexism going on within Dignity, plus being aware of the fact that the Church is sexist?

Well, the church itself is sexist. No one denies that this could be the basis for many of the women's complaints, not against Dignity as it exists but against Dignity as they think it exists. So the sexism that exists in the church, they presuppose exists in Dignity. Dignity being predominantly male is no one's fault except a pure chance of geography and psychology. The Chapters of Dignity are all in big cities, basically. And anyone who's come out of the closet, and he's from a small town, you're going to aim for the big town where you can get lost and a male can make that move easier in our society than a female can. And that's why I would think that if you check any big city it is predominantly male homosexuals who are there, so of course any organization that begins is going to be predominantly male homosexual. The only exception to what I have just said is MCC here in Chicago. They have a great deal of women. And they can't explain how they got them, and we can't explain why we don't.

other educational or charitable institution.

Judge Ross Sterling stated in his ruling "the ordinance is too broad and is not a reasonable regulation of the time, place and manner of handling materials deemed by some persons to be pornographic." In testimony at the hearing, City Councilman Frank Mann had strongly defended the city's attempt to curb the sale of so-called pornography. According to Ray Hill, executive director of the Houston Human Rights League, "Mann made it clear that he would ultimately get all homosexuals, perverts, oddwads and chicken-hawks out of Houston."

LEGISLATIVE

CHILD PORNO & PROSTITUTION
BILL APPROVED BY
U.S. SENATE UNIT

A new bill unanimously approved September 14th by the Senate Judiciary Committee would make it a federal crime to use anyone under 16 years of age in pornographic productions. A sharp increase in federal penalties would also be included for sale or distribution of such material.

The legislation, sponsored by Sen. Charles Mathias (R-Md) and Sen. John Culver (D-Ia), includes provisions for prosecution of persons involved in transporting youths under 18 years old (both male and female) across state lines for the purpose of prostitution.

An attempted amendment by Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) to strengthen the provisions concerning the distribution of child pornography was defeated by the committee chaired by Sen. Culver. The amendment was seen as adding the risk of having the entire bill declared unconstitutional.

The House has been holding extensive hearings on the subject but to date has not taken any action to counter what is termed an organized spread of this form of child abuse. Sen. Culver commented to reporters that he has assurances from Senate majority leader Robert Byrd (D-W.Va.) that prompt action will be taken on the new proposal on the Senate floor.

NAVAL FASHIONS: THE BATTLE OF THE BULGE

A trend to the modern and reversion to the old are in the works for navy uniforms. While pregnant Navy officers and enlisted women are getting maternity uniforms, there will be a return to tight fitting bell bottoms for enlisted men.

For the women, the code had included the shift to civilian maternity clothing since the ban on pregnant service people was lifted two years ago. Prior to that, pregnancy meant automatic discharge for any woman who became pregnant. Now the Navy allows them to stay in and allows discharge on request before the child is born and afterward under special circumstances.

As for the men, the Navy top brass has reversed its six year old order fully implemented two years ago to dress sailors in the lower grades in the same uniforms as petty officers and above. Following a survey of all ranks, 87% favored restoring the old uniforms of bell-bottoms, jumpers and round white hats rather than the less physique revealing coat, white shirt, tie and peaked hat. The original shift to the "one Navy concept" was promoted to "raise morale" in the lower ranks but, in effect, produced the reverse effect according to the official poll taken early this year. Additionally, many Navy veterans complained that by abandoning bell-bottoms, the service had given up "one of its most popular (sex?) symbols."

MEDIA

NEW NEWS IS GOOD NEWS

The variety and expansion of news coverage for the nation's leading cities moved forward with some notable changes and additions in New York and Chicago. The new revamped-format of the Field Enterprises Chicago Daily News was a sweeping departure in daily newsprint style. It's like having a new paper in the city that could attract readers from the competition (ie. The Chicago Tribune). Meanwhile, the other Field daily, the Sun-Times, has undergone some minor cosmetic changes under the direction of Editor-in-chief James Hoge. In NYC the name battle continues for the proposed new daily The Trib. The N.Y. Times has been trying to keep the new newspaper from using a variation of a name they claim belongs to their co-owned Paris-based International Herald Tribune. The new Trib has countered with a $7.5 million dollar suit against the giant, claiming "unlawful conspiracy" to prevent them from publishing.

PUBLISHERS SCORECARD

Some major shifting is taking place in the "straight" and/or pro-gay press. James Brady, editor of the New York Magazine, was moved by publisher Rupert Murdoch to the position of associate publisher of the New York Post newspaper. The Post recently was the newspaper that published the interview where author Patricia Nell Warren publicly "came out" while the New York Magazine's current issue featured a cover story on "Gay Clout".

MALZONE INTERVIEW (fm pg 11)

What effect has Fr. McNeil had on Dignity?

John McNeil is our pet or product, you might say. Or more like a parent with a child. John is the co-founder of Dignity/New York which came after Chicago. First there was L.A., then Chicago, then New York. So when N.Y. was formed, those of us in Dignity got to know John McNeil at that time. And he was a friend, another "lightpost" along the way, and he happened to be a priest. For a Catholic, this happens to be a very important thing. I don't mean to say we depend completely on our clergy but the clergy are very important in our spiritual life.

When they silenced him, it wasn't a martyr thing, it was an old friend who had been kicked in the teeth. What it did do was make us more angry, and more determined, that we were going to stick together. That we truly had a mission in life, both to the Church and the Gay community. It united us more closely together. I think, through this, the Church made one of its biggest mistakes and the Church has made many mistakes.

Why and how did Fr. McNeil get the "Impirmi Potest"?

For those of us who had a background in theology, we realized that this was the foundation. A man's inherent dignity is as a child of God. He was only reaffirming this but he is speaking now as an established theologian. It wasn't new but it now had authority behind it. And this is why the idea of the permission from the superior was of utmost importance to us. Any young kid would come up to you and say, "Does the Cardinal approve of the mass? What does the Church say about you people?" So if we could get this official stamp of the Church on the book, then we had such a stand, and any new one coming up who had any questions, had the authority of the Church now. So poor John maneuvered, say prostituted himself.

The manuscript is sent to Rome, and it sat in Rome for over a year and absolutely nothing is being done with it. After using all the influence and pull that you have, this clout within the Church, the book was finally given to the Superior General of the Jesuits. He then sent the book back to the head of the Jesuits in New York City, who would be Fr. McNeil's local superior, and was told that whatever he decided, the rest of the society would go along with. If the society would go along with it, and the Jesuits are very powerful in the Catholic Church, then Rome would go along with it. So the thing came back to John McNeil and his local superior to iron this thing out. He contacted theologians here in the United States who read the book and the Jesuits themselves read the book. So with a little compromise they granted permission for the book to be published. All of a sudden he's talking about the dignity of man, the homosexual cannot help this, this is the way God has created him, and then the last chapter he makes the turn, "If the homosexual only tried to be different, if he only tried to be heterosexual, and if he can't make it, that's fine, but he should at least try." That's not what he says for the whole book.

Do you think he might have compromised his own consciousness?

Yes, I think so, but I appreciate it. It's like if you're starving to death, and you never ate salami and there's nothing else to eat, you'll eat a piece of salami. And John I'm sure was desperate to have the book printed. And this was the compromise he thought he could make. This is just my opinion now, but I think, he felt that anyone reading the book could see exactly what he was doing. Because the last chapter stands so uniquely by itself that anyone who even understood the Gay movement could see the book and could see that this is where he had to make a break to get the "impirmi potest" on the book.

Explain the silence to me.

When they say he is silenced it means on a particular subject. In this particular case it's homosexuality. So on this subject he may never now, until Rome rescinds it, speak in public, write or be quoted. He could speak to an individual, but not to you because you have that little machine going.

I assume that the silencing takes effect immediately. How then could he make his final statement a week later?

The statement that he made would be considered a private statement to us, at the convention. We then took it upon ourselves to issue the statement to the rest of the world. So, technically speaking, we can be just as bitchy. Every possible word in the proclamation had to be analyzed and that's what we did. He told us how he felt and we told the world what he told us. So technically he did not issue a statement.

MALZONE INTERVIEW (fm pg 13)

Did the Church allow that final statement or did they just overlook it?

When men were silenced in the past, they were silenced and they were not allowed to speak at all. John I would say, stretched the point just a little bit.

Now that Fr. McNeil is silenced, what happens to the book?

The book, as it was printed, could be used in the seminaries, throughout the country. The book could be used by priests in counseling, in high school, because of the imprimi potest. The Church didn't silence the book itself, but when they take away the imprimi potest from the book, it withdraws its authority. But still, for example, the Jesuits, and I think of Jesuits because they have a tendency to do outlandish things, could bring the book into a class. But with the imprimi potest it would stand equal with any other theology book on the subject. This is the same thing with the American Theological Society. The book they produced, "Human Sexuality", and the chapters they produced on homosexuality, saying it is a natural state, and when the Church talks about unnatural acts, such acts are not unnatural to the homosexual. That book is part of John McNeil's problem. It just picks up his theme and carries it on. Now, by a bunch of straight American Theologians the same idea is being propagated and Rome itself has its back up against the wall. They can't silence 100 theologians, but they can silence one.

Does "Human Sexuality" have the imprimi potest?

No, but it doesn't need it. In the sense it's a technical book and it's not being issued to the general public. Though it is now. It's like the Kinsey Report. When it first came out, unless you were in the field, and I was at the time, you couldn't wade through it. So with a theological thing like this, unless you were really a theologian, you never pick up the book. It's just that it hit the press, the news, and was a subject people were interested in and now it has become one of the most popular books in the bookstores. This was never, I don't think, the intent of the authors when they came out with the book.

Assuming that Fr. McNeil would break his silence, what are the technical consequences? What could the Vatican do?

First of all, he would not break his silence. The Church could then strip him of his priesthood, or the functions of his priesthood. We believe that once a priest always a priest. So once a man is ordained, no authority can take away his priesthood. But for him to function within the Church as a legitimate minister of the altar, this could be taken away from him. The old term was to be defrocked.

If he did break his silence, what would the Vatican most likely do? Would they actually defrock him?

I would say yes, privately not publicly, since we wish they would. It would be done quietly through the order. The Church is not looking for publicity either, this is why, a point I want to make is how dumb the Church is. Because the moment you condemn something, you draw attention to it. If you left the thing alone, it would die of its own accord.

Why did they wait and then do it a week before the convention?

It's coincidence, they tell me. We don't know why that time was picked. The topic he was to speak on, at the convention, was "the Book a Year After." So the pride we had at the convention was that the book had existed for a year. Now there were theologians, there were priests, there were confessors, everyone was using the book. That Rome would come out and condemn him at that point, I think it presumptuous to think that the convention was in the eye of Rome. I doubt very much if they really knew that we had a convention. It could be maybe through his superiors, more than through Rome, that this particular time was picked.

Fr. Jim Flack defended the Jesuits. He said that Rome was not really aware of what was going on and that it was the Bishops of the United States who pushed to have him silenced.

I would definitely have to agree with that. I would disagree with the point that Rome doesn't know what is going on. Believe me, for one who has worked in chancery offices, Rome has a spy system like no one else in the world. Much better than Nixon. They all got caught but Rome is still going on. But I definitely have to agree that it was most of the bishops in the United States. The issue had become so obvious, and they not knowing what to do with it, lashed out as they always do, just hit the kid across the mouth so he'll shut up. The only trouble is, you hit a child who's causing a scene, he yells twice as loud, and makes a bigger scene.

Does the Vatican consider Fr. McNeil or his ideas a threat?

Yes. At least the bishops in the United States do. Very little of homosexuality is mentioned in Catholic moral theology at all. You can go through a complete course, and in a footnote they talk about "unnatural acts." That is about the only reference they make to homosexuality. For that reason, therefore, nothing much has been done, even in the councils of the Church. Way back in the 5th and 6th centuries it came up as sort of the 85th document that was issued. They

New West was the publication that forced the old "Newswest" gay tabloid newspaper to change its name to OUT. Under that new name, the gay newspaper published two issues before reportedly going out of business.

Meanwhile, on the Rolling Stone scene out west, 25 year old Jack Ford (son of former President Gerald) is working day and night as the editor of the Stone's step-child Outside, an environmental magazine.

GAY STREET PUBLISHER
ARRESTED

First Amendment crusader Larry Flynt, publisher of Hustler and Chic magazines, dared the Atlanta Georgia police to arrest him after two days of selling his magazines behind the counter of a downtown bookstore. Flynt, whose publishing company is located on Gay Street in Columbus, Ohio, was setting the stage for his fight against Atlanta's obscenity laws. Flynt was arrested predicting that he'll be convicted.

GAY RADIO TEXAS STYLE

Described as the first 24 hour totally gay oriented radio broadcast, "Gay Day" drew $709 in donation pledges for Houston's KPFT-FM. The broadcast on the Pacifica station was entitled "Gay Day" and was an expansion of the regularly scheduled "Wilde 'n Stein" show which is aired every Wednesday night from 10 p.m. to midnight.

With the cooperation of the Houston gay community, the midnight to midnight show on Friday, August 19th consisted of various time segments devoted to organizations for special talk show presentations covering religion, parents of gays, gay parents and interviews on homosexuality in general.

The broadcast day was not without entertainment with three and a half hours of remote broadcasts from the city's leading discos. In addition to the music segments, live interviews gave many of the bar patrons a chance to openly express their place in society.

Ray Hill, nationally known gay activist from Houston summed up the results in a report to Fred Williams of the Montrose Star saying, "I feel the show was a very successful experiment in gay broadcasting." Hill concluded from his discussions at the National Gay Leadership Conference held recently in Denver that "Houston's KPFT and Wilde 'n Stein Collective has the most air time of any (regular) gay radio show in the United States."

ERA

A WHITE HOUSE ENDORSEMENT

Aiding the campaign for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment Rosalynn Carter not only said, "ERA to me means full legal rights for all women," but had donated some money in support of the cause. The check issued to the League of Women Voters' Education Project will assist in countering what Mrs. Carter referred to as "shrill voices on both sides of the issue" that has "prevented many of us from understanding what the Equal Rights Amendment will and will not do." The First Lady concluded that "these legal rights will not change our roles as women."

FUND RAISING FOR RATIFICATION

The combination of demonstration and raising of funds for the passage of the ERA over the Labor Day weekend drew approximately $150,000 according to NOW (National Organization for Women). The demonstrations in 33 states across the nation drew more than a half million people marking the date that women won the right to vote in 1920. The largest display for women's equality was in Washington, D.C. Although the turnout in Chicago was rather small in comparison, over $10,000 was raised for the ratification efforts.

MEDICAL

MORE POOP ON POPPERS

The Chicago Daily News has finally picked up to report a new "rage among sexual experimenters and many young people." The "sex chemical" sniffed to improve sexual intercourse called butyl nitrite and sold at Hollywood (Calif.) adult book stores is reported as "potentially dangerous". According to a UCLA condemned faggots, burn them at the stake. In the United States, it was never mentioned. Then a couple of years ago, the bishops in the United States felt they had to issue a directive to confessors on how to handle homosexuals in the confessional. Unless the movement had been growing, unless there was something going on, why would they all of a sudden dust off the old books on the shelf and start issuing documents where they haven't for over 500 years? The homosexual has been around all that time. So why is Rome now picking up? Because the movement is picking up. The bishops issued their statement. Then Rome comes out with their statement. But the biggest part was that no one really gave a damn what Rome had to say.

What's your overall picture of Dignity's future? Where do you think Dignity is going now?

Well, our main objective is to cooperate with other Gay groups in civil legislation and I think civil legislation will come. Dignity is powerful in the sense that it is a Catholic vote. The Catholic vote in the United States is very important. Chicago is a city of 4½ million people. It has approximately 2 million Roman Catholics. It's the largest diocese in the world. If then with the old statistic of one out of ten are Gay, there are an awful lot of Gay Catholics running around the city of Chicago, that Dignity, with a membership of 200 has not reached yet. If this is true of Chicago, it must be true of all other cities. Another goal we have is how many more Catholics can we get interested in Dignity to give Dignity more impact. So, in the future, maybe we'll take our place with the National Gay Task Force. If you get enough Catholics together in the United States, it's a tremendous power. I think we'll be one of the largest Gay groups connected with the National Gay Task Force in time.

HALF WAY BETWEEN SUIT

Pat Lepley has filed a half million dollar damage suit against Vanderbilt Hospital in Nashville, Tenn. charging that they did not complete a sex-change operation. The refusal of the institution has left the patient half woman and half man. The suit contends that the hospital refused to complete the surgery after removing the woman's womb and breasts, fearing that any additional work would not be covered by medical insurance. The surgeon, Dr. David G. Bowers, also named in the suit, said the decision was made because Ms. Lepley had "psychological problems." However, according to her attorney, Pat has had homosexual tendencies since age 13 and now in her 30's, she wanted the operation so she could marry another woman.

Dear Jeannie:

Well, you finally did it! After reading your most recent column, I was not only amused but gratified and instructed, and I felt the time during which I read your column was well spent, indeed! Over the past few years either I have mellowed or you have matured, or possibly it's a little of both. I hope this is an indication of continued enjoyment I'll get while reading your column.

I know I've been critical of your efforts in the past, and I'm not about to recant anything I've said about them. However, I do want to be fair and when I think you've done a praiseworthy job, I want you to know what I think about that, too, for what it's worth.

Just out of curiosity, Jeannie, could it be possible that your attitude toward certain people has been modified over the past few years? How much sympathy do you now have for those silly, vapid people who depend upon you to do their thinking for them? I know it's flattering at first to be asked for advice, but when people will not take the responsibility for the direction of their own lives and continually want you to do it for them, I'll bet you begin to feel like the mama cat who finds it necessary to take a sandbox break even though her eliminatory needs may not be urgent. Then there is the plethora of smut-minded wretches who now find it all but impossible to get their minds above their waistlines, using their homosexuality as an excuse, but being offensive crashing bores as a result. I've found that most of those of this ilk just mentioned are most uncomfortable if they suddenly find themselves in a group where the subject matter of the conversation centers upon other than themselves, attractive male attributes, SEX and SEXual conquests and SEX! Of course, they do not, as a rule, tolerate any other kind of SEX than the kind of SEX that appeals to them! But to be fair, I must say that their tastes run a rather wide gamut. To paraphrase the rooster, "Any cock'll do!" Is there still a wistful tear to be found in the corner of your eye for the likes of them, Jeannie? Maybe there should be in mine, but there isn't.

I'm glad you printed Ray's letter. I was pleased at the answer you gave him. I, too, can remember the distress I felt at the overpowering emotional reaction when I would involuntarily pay another person the highest possible compliment. You gave a resourceful and informative answer to John's query, and his mind should now be more at ease thereby. To Ron's frivolous letter you gave a suitable response, and you concluded your column on a well-delivered humorous note. As far as I am concerned, you certainly did a "good scale" on this one, Lady, and I hope you keep up the good work!

I'll have to confess, Jeannie, even though I have criticized you severely in the past, I would overlook much of the content of the paper, but I would NEVER miss your column! I know it's a helluva lot easier to take pot shots at those who are DOING something than to take the initiative and DO something, especially when what you DO draws public attention.

Richard

Ah, Richard:

At first glance it seemed as though the machine that spews the venom also drips the honey, but now I'm not so sure. Of course, I appreciate your kind words just as I've considered your criticisms lo, these many years. And although you have, indeed, mellowed, I believe that you're still missing a very basic point: you're looking at "those silly, vapid people" collectively instead of seeing them as individuals with problems which, although they may share them with others, are unique to THEM. Sure, many times it's the same, old song . . . but the singer is different each time, and that's what counts!

Dear Ms. Barney:

I am a young, trim and still quite sought-after 42, but because the figures on my drivers license state that fact, a private club refused to grant me a membership, stating that their age limit was 35. The hurt at the time was nearly unbearable. Nothing like that had ever happened to me before, nor has it happened since at any other place. The hurt is renewed periodically by a friend or acquaintance who will speak of the club and then register disbelief that, indeed, I was refused membership.

More than any other feeling, though, is my feeling of revulsion toward another instance of blatant discrimination of gay people by gay people. Particularly today when we are faced with what is shaping up to be one of our grimmest battles for survival. Gay businessmen operating entirely gay-oriented establishments would hardly be successful without the support of the gay community.

Boycotts and letters of criticism are effective in these cases, but what soothes the hurt feelings of all those who have been the victims of this kind of cruel discrimination?

Dear R.L.T.:

I'm sure that it's small consolation, but I've spoken with the manager of the establishment to which you refer and he assured me that age, per se, is no grounds to deny membership. The club is, however, very stringent in its identification requirements: a potential member must present a drivers license, a U.S. passport and a state identification card, so if bucking them is worth the hassle, go ahead. Of course, this does not salve the wound, and I could do at least 20 minutes arguing both sides of the issue. Instead, I'll merely suggest that you chalk up the encounter to tactlessness and patronize those clubs which welcome you; everyone will be a lot more comfortable in the long run.

National Gay Blue Jean Day. NGTF Action Report editor, M. David Stein said, "With adequate publicity the result, of course, is that very few blue jeans are visible that day. The point is an educational one: Non-gays are forced to stop and consider for once, 'What if everyone thought I was gay?' Those who fail to do so, and automatically slip into their normal campus costume, may get a thought-provoking taste of discrimination." He also pointed out that, "gays in the closet can use the occasion to 'test the water' for coming out; then if challenged, they can claim to be forgetful 'straights.'"

EPISCOPALIANS SPLIT OVER WOMEN PRIESTS

More than 1,500 disgruntled Episcopalians held a three day meeting in St. Louis, Mo. September 14th-16th and formed a new nation-wide break-away church "Diocese of the Holy Trinity". The headquarters of the new organization will be in California with Father James Mote formerly of St. Mary's in Denver, Colorado as the presiding Bishop. Another local independent diocese was also disclosed for San Francisco, California.

The ordination of women as priests over a year ago was cited as the main objection by the group meeting under the name of the Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen. To date, although there have been about three dozen women ordained, none of the new female priests have been assigned to parishes including Rev. Mary Ellen Barrett, the first open lesbian.

Meeting at the Chase Park Plaza Hotel, the group also stated their second concern was objection to the revision of the centuries-old Book of Common Prayer claiming that the new wording has changed the theology and doctrinal content originally intended.

Chicagoan Ira Jones, who has been active in the church and involved with Integrity (Gay Episcopalians), attended the meetings as an observer. Although additional dissent of the new organization centers around aspects of "social permissiveness", Jones said there was no related open discussion on the subject. The liberalism on moral issues including abortion, remarriage and homosexuality. Mr. Jones indicated that many in attendance, including presiding U.S. Bishop Allin, were not there to endorse the idea of the diocese but merely to "observe". He further estimated that there were also quite a few gays in attendance.

INTERNATIONAL

THE "BUY CANDIAN" SQUEEZE

Billed as "Anita's Canadian Sunset" by Boston's Gay Community News, Anita Bryant has been replaced by Candian singer Catherine McKennon as the publicist for Florida orange juice on Candian television commercials. Although Ms. McKennon, wife of "Hee-Haw" actor Don Harron, is selling a U.S. product, the move is stated as a Canadian Radio and Television Commission rule that 75% of the commercials shown in Canada must have "Canadian content". This reason has thus been given to counter the assumption that Anita was replaced because of her anti-gay political and religious preachings.

BRITISH PORNO CRACKDOWN

The national crackdown on child pornographic material that started in the United States in Chicago via a Tribune expose seems to be having its international effects with a recent crackdown in London. Police are reported to have raided an undisclosed number of bookstores in London and other British cities. The report from Scotland Yard on September 5, 1977 said that "thousands" of pornographic books and movies featuring young children were seized in an attempt to curtail the sale of such material.

SPORTS

U.S. OPEN OPENED UP

Following a court order to permit transsexual Renne Richards (nee Richard Raskind) to enter the U.S. Open Tennis events at Forest Hills, N.Y., the doctor turned pro was solidly defeated by England's Virginia Wade. Ms. Wade went on from her first round win of Ms. Richards to tie for the honor of 3rd place in the Women's Singles.

Chicago Daily News sports columnist Dave Nightingale commented about the controversial event that "the earth did not quake because of Renee's appearance, the city of New York did not plunge headlong into another blackout and the sun rose in the east following the event on Friday."

Ms. Richards was reported by Peggy Constantine in the Chicago Sun-Times as hoping "she's freeing others by going through personal torture." She confessed she has had a lot of personal grief in the last few years. But it's been worth it from a social standpoint, adding, "I'm able to do for a group of people what the majority of them couldn't do."

In conjunction with a Chicago Sun-Times series on Juvenile Justice, reporter Mike Anderson relayed some advice that a psychologist passed out to new youths entering the systems Correctional Department. The psychologist, no longer with the department, said he would advise a new

"little white kid" with "long blond hair, soft little baby skin, little baby face. About 15 years old. Naive as hell," to "act crazy and act like a girl." He said the "rational reaction, the natural reaction of a kid to an attempted assault would be to fight, to protest, to reassert his manhood." He contends that it is most effective if the victim screams, bites and scratches. "Why? Because the challenge is to rob someone else's manliness. Then, you've made him a 'girl'. But if he's a 'girl' at the get go and you assault him - what does that make you?"

The results from the big tough guys will be, "That guy's weird! Leave him alone! He's a fag, man, the guy's a fag!" But Dan Keley concluded "you're not going to be assaulted."

MALE PRIDE!!!

The controversy over the use of the suffix "person" has emerged in the Chicago Tribune's Voice of the People section (Letters to the Editor). A printed complaint charged that the news media has elected to print "Chairperson" when referring to a woman and has retained the old "chairman" for men thus making the first use a compounded sexist term. Answering the objection, a Mattoon, Illinois man replied "Hold on! Speak for yourself." Barry Haist stated that he is a male who wants to be called a man and further stated, "If members of the feminist movement are embarrassed by their sex, that is their business. If they would rather be called a person, thing, it, or what-have you instead of a woman, that is their right." He concluded, "As for me, I am a man and proud of it."

SPECIAL REPORT

Recently, two couples who have marked many years of being together as "lovers" publicly took the occasion of their anniversaries to reaffirm their position of love and a continued pledge of union and understanding.

The two local events marked different types of "celebrations" for each pair. Allen Gustafson and Dick Nielsen (better known as Allen & Dickie of A & A Roofing) after almost ten years together chose to solemnize their relationship at a "blessing of the union" performed by Rev. Ken Martin of the MCC/Good Shepherd Parish. Their vows were spoken at a candle light 20 minute ceremony on September 10th at the Greenleaf. The event paralleled that of a "straight" wedding with the exchanging of rings and the after ceremony embraces. The reception following consisted of the traditional champagne, buffet and wedding cake. However, in the case of the cake, the nuptial arch on top was especially prepared with two "grooms". A bit of frivolousness took place with the tossing of the bridal bouquet and garter belt.

On Sunday evening September 18th, Jim Slater and Jim Gates (of Little Jim's on North Halsted) selected the regularly scheduled Dignity Mass to mark "our first decade" together. This special service before a packed congregation at St. Sebastians Church, was followed by an anniversary reception in the school auditorium.

Little and Big Jim provided their guests with refreshments and live entertainment by Tommy Oman and Paula Karol. Noted attorney Paul R. Goldman presented the pair with a cherished memento associated with his 42 years of marriage to Mrs. Goldman.

Because same-sex marriages are not legal under civil law, it is not the intent of the Church to perform a ceremony in contradiction of either the law or doctrine of the Church.

however, gay religious organizations have incorporated union ceremonies similar to weddings or will conduct special services honoring the continuing of such relationships.

GCNews/Journal invited Rev. Valerie Anne Bouchard to explain the MCC description of their "Holy Union." Her explanation follows.

The Universal Fellowship of Metropolitan Community Churches contains within its provisions for Sacraments and Rites of the church, both a ceremony for Matrimony and the Rite of Holy Union. There is a difference between the two, and I would like to take a moment to explain how a Holy Union works.

Many gay people, after they've been together for a while, wish to have some kind of ceremony to celebrate the closeness that these two people feel for each other. Often people call the church office, or come into the office asking how they can get married.

Let me just say that Holy Union and Matrimony are two separate functions. Marriage is a legal contract between two people of the opposite sex who enter into a relationship with legal implications. That's why a man and woman go to the marriage bureau to sign for a marriage license which makes them legally married. They are then entitled to certain legal benefits such as filing a joint income tax return. If a heterosexual couple wishes to have their relationship blessed in church, they go to a minister or priest and request Holy Matrimony.

By law, two people of the same sex cannot be married. What can be done however, is to perform a ceremony of blessing before God for those two people. It would be against the law for the church to call such a ceremony a marriage or Holy Matrimony, so we have a Rite entitled Holy Union.

At the local church here, we require that two people have been together for at least six months so that they have had a chance to test compatability. We also take the opportunity to engage in a counseling relationship to get to know each other. The two people involved are free to plan a service according to individual taste. Incidentally, a couple need not be gay to request a Holy Union.

O.J. BOYCOTT . . . CHARGING AT WINDMILLS

by R. P. Gernhardt

Following the National Leadership Conference in Denver calling for a National Boycott of Florida Orange Juice products, a number of gay organizations have followed suit and called for the boycott in major cities.

In addition to pushing a drive to request gays and pro-gay persons and businesses to avoid buying or selling any orange product that utilizes Florida Citrus, the boycotts have generally included a request of the Florida Citrus Commission to make public statements in support of gay rights in employment. Most of the boycotts have not included the demand that the Commission terminate Anita Bryant's contract, feeling that this would be in violation of her freedom of speech under the 1st amendment and her right to employment regardless of her personal anti-gay views and public proclamations.

The difficulty with making demands from the Florida Citrus Commission centers around the fact that this is an agency of the State of Florida government system and thus is regulated by the legislature. The Commission had refused to bend to such demands issued by the Dade County (Fla.) Coalition for Humanistic Rights for Gays. To similar demands from the Dallas (Texas) Gay Political Caucus the Florida Commission responded by telegram stating they (the Commission) were a state agency, and as such would not issue a "human rights" statement beyond the fact that their policies regarding employing homosexuals were governed by the laws of the State of Florida.

The effectiveness of these boycotts is being hampered by not having a focal point to concentrate market place efforts. On the retail level, the only way to boycott fresh oranges is to only purchase oranges stamped with the leading California brand of Sunkist. Most Florida oranges are unmarked when removed from boxes in the produce department. In the case of frozen concentrates or liquid orange juice, the majority of the brands are processed from Florida citrus including some manufactured in California.

Definition of the extent of coverage regarding the boycott by brand name and inclusion of related products manufactured by the parent companies has further deterred the O.J. Boycott effectiveness. In the endorsement of a boycott by the Gay and Lesbian Coalition of Metropolitan Chicago, two brands were mentioned for target concentration: Tropicana and Minutemaid. Tropicana was singled out as reported to have contributed to the Save Our Children campaign. Minutemaid, which is a division of Coca Cola, further complicates the issue on two counts. The questions include: Should such a boycott include the parent company and be extended to Coke and other members of their soft drink family including Fanta Orange Soda, an artificial product? The other question moves into an area of major labor relations between Coca Cola and the United Farm Workers Union in Florida. The magnitude of effecting a boycott that was born of what has been implied to be a conservative anti-gay coalition involving much more than just Anita Bryant now has implicated a major fight against giants.

It appears to be a major declaration of war for the gay community to unite to fight the state government of Florida, its Citrus Commission and every major corporation that is involved in one way or another with the lowly orange. One could almost envision the parable of a gay Don Quixote charging through a smudge pot clouded orange grove slashing at the blossoms wearing sunglasses.

It also appears that a lot of time, talent and money will be expended to wage a Florida boycott war. It seems now our warring energies should be shifted to an initiative fight in California, the local battle in Wichita, Kansas or the lobby efforts for the pending gay rights legislation in Washington, D.C.

To The Editor:

During the Labor Day weekend the City of Chicago was gracious enough to host over 600 gay men and women from all over the English-speaking world. The conventioners were members & friends of DIGNITY - an organization of gay & concerned Catholics.

As a delegate from the City of Brotherly Love I would like to take the time to thank everyone concerned; the Bismark Hotel, Beacon Tours of Boston, the Parish of St. Sebastian, the bars and especially our wonderful and hard-working brothers and sisters of DIGNITY/Chicago.

Speaking for myself and many other out-of town delegates I spoke with, I was struck by the friendship, pride and hospitality shown to us by the Windy City's gay community. Everything was so beautifully organized and we were made to feel at home from the minute our plane touched down at O'Hare up until the time we left. With so much persecution and harassment going on against us these days it was a beautiful experience for all concerned.

Please accept our heart-felt appreciation. Chicago has a lot to be proud of.

Sincerely yours,
DIGNITY/Philadelphia

Dear Editor:

The August 1977 issue of the GCNews/Journal reported that the Chicago Tribune along with the Sun Times, The Chicago Daily News and The Wall Street Journal refused to print an ad for Lend-A-Man Ltd., the private licensed employment agency serving the gay community. The Tribune people, in phone conversations with Lend-A-Man indicated it was contrary to their policy to accept any classified ads containing the words "gay", "lesbian" or "homosexual". As a result of that decision by The Chicago Tribune, representatives from LAM met with Tribune ad execs and the attorneys from both sides to discuss the matter. At the meeting LAM principals were asked to submit extensive information from their company's records for examination. Lend-A-Man was told that upon receipt of the information a decision regarding the results of that review would be handed down in twenty-four hours.

On the day the meeting was held, Dem Hopkins, co-owner of Lend-A-Man, conducted an all night vigil in front of the Tribune Tower during which time informational leaflets were distributed to passers-by. Many of these were carried into the Tribune building by employees and, reportedly at least, this caused considerable consternation in those hallowed halls.

The information requested by the Tribune people was sent to them on August 2. But, instead of the twenty-four hour decision promised, a request for still more information was presented to the LAM attorney on August 10. That information was sent to the Tribune by LAM's attorney on August 11. It was several more days after that before LAM's legal eagle, Mr. Joe Schumann, received a response. Yes, they said, they would accept advertising for Lend-A-Man. Of course, some alteration in the copy as originally presented would be necessary for acceptability, but they would agree to print that all important line "The private licensed employment agency specializing in the placement of gay men and women". In view of the Tribune's original refusal to accept any classified ad using the words "gay", "lesbian" or "homosexual" this is considered to be a major breakthrough for both Lend-A-Man and the gay community.

Sincerely,
Dick Nielsen
Lend-A-Man Ltd.

Dear Mr. Gernhardt:

In your "Lifestyle" column of Sept. 1977, you expressed concern over the recently announced distribution of Blueboy magazine by the Flynt Distributing Company. You wondered "if the new association will produce a GAY Hustler and revive such features as the gross 'S&M' number that Blueboy produced last year." You ask, finally, "Who's hustlin' who?"

As the editor of Blueboy, I can assure you that Blueboy is not (to use your term) "hustling" anyone. In fact, we view the increased distribution made possible by the Flynt organization as a service to the gay community - and to the artists, writers and photographers whose work will appear with even greater frequency in the pages of Blueboy. If you view this arrangement in terms of "pushing a product," then I suggest that the product in question is a sophisticated and necessary one that ought to reach as many gay men and women as possible. There are those, sadly, who would deny free expression to gay people, deeming anything gay as "gross." It is unfortunate that a fellow member of the gay press also resorts to charges of grossness and, in the process, overlooks the vast quantity of material published by Blueboy that in no way relates to "gross 'S&M'." I would be happy to send you sample copies of the magazine, without charge, to better familiarize you with our "product."

A final point about "hustling." In Volume IV of Blueboy (Jan./Feb. 1976), a black & white drawing appears on page 35 that, with only slight alteration, also appears on the back cover of the Sept. 1977 issue of GCNews/Journal. As the illustrator of this artwork, I wonder if you know that it was reproduced without my foreknowledge or permission. Sexual preference, Mr. Gernhardt, is not gross; a rip-off is.

Sincerely,
Bruce Fitzgerald

Here is an item that I hope you will use in your next issue. . . .

Gender Services is still alive and well . . . and still operating. Even with the loss of our office space at 2745 North Clark Street last February due to fire, we are still doing business.

There have been a few changes in our program such as the two new board members: Mr. Lee Mercer of Mercer & Associates of Evanston, and Kitty who has been very active in redeveloping the Rap Groups which now meet at 615 West Wellington (home of MCC-Chicago) and she has many new ideas and plans for the groups, such as a Birthday Party for Gender Services in October-----we are three years old the end of this month, also a Halloween Party for those that are active in Gender Services programs. The groups usually meet the first and third Tuesdays at 7 p.m. in the Community Room. There is a donation/fee of $5 per meeting to cover the cost of renting the room and some of the other expenses that we incur.

We have two addresses: Our regular mailing address is GENDER SERVICES OF CHICAGO, POST OFFICE BOX 1491, EVANSTON, IL 60201, and letters to the president/founder can be sent to GENDER SERVICES OF CHICAGO, % MR. JOHN PROWETT, 11 WEST DIVISION, APT. 607, CHICAGO, IL. 60610.

My thanks to Don, Kitty, Lee and all the people that see the value and potential of the program, and to Vanessa, Susan and Tiffany for all the help they have been in the past.

I'd like to close by quoting from an article that I read in the Chicago Reader three weeks ago which I think fits all of us at one time or another . . . "DON'T HATE BIGOTS- - -PITY THEM. ONE SHOULD PITY ANY MAN OR WOMAN WHO NEEDS SOMEONE TO HATE IN ORDER TO MAKE THEMSELVES FEEL MORE IMPORTANT" - amen.

MORE THAN A MR. WHO?

by Ralph Paul

Bob Breeding is one of those persons that upon meeting for the first time abounds with energy, excitement and a very real sense of warmth. The extent of his surface personality of masculine good looks and extroverted nature could be a deterrent to find the inner man is all the above and much more. The much more is that of a talented thoughtful artist.

Bob was introduced to Gay Chicago as the winner of the title of Mr. Grapevine 1977 representing the now defunct (destroyed by fire) gay bar on North Halsted Street. Though the bar was no longer operating, he was still sponsored in the Mr. Windy City Contest in June and carried home the 2nd runner up trophy.

and works on developing his art forms in a commercial and aesthetic scene. Currently, the commercial aspect of his art is heading into the seasonal job of creating leaf covered boxes. Aesthetically, his "carpet constructions" have been laid to one side until after the holidays.

After two years of producing the "leaf boxes" Bob has gained the stature of selling his "product" to fashionable shops and stores for the Christmas gift shopper. This fall he will gather leaves in the Lincoln Park area and craft them into 100 signed and dated pieces. Half of these will be sold after December 1st in the three leading Marshall Field & Company stores including the Michigan Avenue Water Tower Place location. Prior to the collection of leaves, hours have already been spent on the preparatory sanding and staining of the boxes. He says, "I'll be working like a madman, day and night, from September through Christmas. But I love it!" He works alone and wouldn't have it any other way. And he estimates that there are approximately ten hours of labor involved in each box that sells for $80 to $100 on the retail market.

The leaf covered boxes above and right are not only Bob Breeding's main source of income but will keep him working night and day this fall to fill orders from such stores as Marshall Field and Company.

In the belief that God's art is far more spectacular than anything that man can recreate, Bob has developed a process (similar to decoupage) for adhering the autumn leaves to the wooden boxes and glazing them so that the color can be preserved. He uses all different species, shapes and colors of leaves, his only requirement being that they are "beautiful". The leaves are overlapped like fish scales or shingles on a roof. Each box receives from five to eight coats of varnish. The insides are lined with suede and range in size from 3½" x 6" to 7" x 12". The boxes make nice containers for jewelry or cigarettes or just as an art object on a shelf or table.

The leaf-covered boxes have been mistaken for everything from snake skin and alligator to marble and even tortoise shell. Euonymus and maple are the artists favorite leaves, but he also uses the hawthorne, silver poplar, gingko, elm, sumac and many others.

Breeding likes to compare his leaf art to the ideals of "catch a falling star" or "save time in a bottle" because he captures each leaf at its height of autumnal beauty, uses it fresh and seals it with varnish immediately. Fading is so slight as to be imperceptible. The color range is from subtle pinks and corals to the stronger reds and greens letting the art form blend or contrast to any decor. "Green," Bob points out, "is the color most likely to fade as it is derived from chlorophyll, the least stable of the elements. Pure red never fades."

In countering the time and expense of hand crafted art objects, Bob is quick to point out "that to be more competitive in the market place, they should be made by little ladies in China." But in a day and age which is increasingly characterized by computers and bureaucracies, it is nice to see an individual who is involved in a hand-craft, doing "his own thing".

At the present time "his own thing" of filling his "leaf box" orders for Christmas is his main source of income augmented by some gallery sales of his carpet constructions. In his development of this aspect of his talent Bob points out that as a "constructivist" his work is not to be confused with that of a weaver or a textile artist. Carpet constructions are held together by means of a liquid latex adhesive and applied to a continuous canvas backing. Here he uses only the highest quality wool carpeting blending subtleties of color and texture. The erotic forms are derived from nature and the origins of life presented with phallic masculinity and sperm like design. Presently his only outlet for these "constructions" is thru the Nancy Lurie Gallery at 1632 N. LaSalle Street.

Bob began developing his art in the fall of 1975 when he was laid off by the architectural firm of Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, following his leave of absence for a European vacation. His termination from the Architectural Interior Designing section of this giant company associated with the building of the Hancock Center and the Sears Tower, made him determined to earn a living without a necktie or a "straight job". Personally, the 29 year old says he's "never been in a closet". He claims he's been gay half his life (he'll be 30 November 11th). "I had my first 'lover' when I was 15 in my second year of high school," terior design scene, he and a "friend" (we had a relationship) packed up and went to San Francisco in 1971 to "experience life". In '73 he felt it was time to do something with his life and the pair moved to Chicago where he went to work and his partner went back to school.

Happy with the acceptance and commercial appeal of this "leaf art", Bob envisions the day when his boxes will be collectors items comparable to Tiffany glass. He is optimistic in his hope that his "constructions" will some day be included in the New York Museum of Modern Art. Carpet is his current medium because of cost and he envisions the use of other materials including metals.

As an artist, Bob has his direction defined in the school of early 20th century expressionist Kandinsky and Arp. "I consider myself an organic, fluid expressionist," Bob commented. He continued, "The two aspects that give my work its greatest strength and variety are; first, exploring a new and exciting medium (not paint and canvas) and second, my free form constructions are an innovative departure from the very tired and over used rectangle."

"If 'Jimmy Who?' can get elected President, then surely I can achieve some measure of success," Bob concluded, "I firmly believe that any and all of us are capable of achieving any goal that we believe in and concentrate on strongly enough." As a person, he is energetic and idealistic in addition to being gay and sexy as hell.

Bob recalls. That was back in Gainesville, Texas not far from the Dallas/Fort Worth area.

As a graduate with a Bachelors degree in Architectural Interior design from North Texas State University, Bob Breeding moved to New York in 1969 to do graduate work at Pratt Institute. Not wanting to get caught up in the New York in-

BODY BUILDING

by Don Eric

The first known weight lifter was Milo of ancient Greece, who when he was a boy, lifted a calf up over his head, and kept doing this every day as the two of them grew up. Eventually, Milo could lift a full grown bull. This established the principle of progressive weight training: about every two weeks (not every day!) you increase the poundage and thus the size and strength of your muscles.

There are two activities that use barbells, dumbbells, and other resistance devices (machines): weight lifting and body building. Weight lifting is primarily for building strength to be used in lifting contests in competition with others, and to improve in other sports and contests including football, Olympic events, arm wrestling, etc. Body building is not done primarily to build strength, although it does this as a by-product. Body building is taken up in order to improve appearance in muscle size, articulation, and proportion. It converts all that work into beauty. A body builder is a sculptor whose material is not wood or marble, but his own body. The exercises and procedures in weight lifting and in body building are somewhat different, and the two activities have their own contests, organizations, and fans. Within certain limitations, everybody can build a better looking body. The chief limitation is that a person is born with only so many muscle fibers per muscle. The more you have, the bigger the muscle can get. However, anyone can work so that whatever his endowment, each muscle will bulge out separately from each other muscle and provide that articulation seen on the Greek statues: it then doesn't matter if the muscles are each huge or not. That they can stand out from one another even when you are relaxed is the important thing.

There are four things you need to remember in building muscle: DIET, REST, RIGHT EFFORT and HANDLING THE RESULTS.

DIET. Body builders usually eat plenty of protein both as meat, eggs, cheese and so forth, and as expensive liquid or powder. Liquid amino acids are probably better than soy or milk powder, but these are all right. There are some people who claim that lots of vegetables are important. At any rate, avoid junk food. The easy to remember trick is to avoid anything with white flour and anything with sugar in it. Fruit and a little honey now and then can serve as sweets. White flour products pack the intestines and sugar is a burden on the body; both turn quickly to fat. Your general health will improve if you avoid all processed foods and anything with chemicals and preservatives. Fresh fruits and vegetables are much cheaper than processed foods anyway. Bread made from whole grains is all right in moderation. So-called health food cereals usually are packed with sugar and are highly suspect. Wheat germ is good. There are two schools of thought on milk. Some drink lots of milk, some avoid it because they think it adds too much fat. A good compromise would be to go to 2% milk, using regular milk now and then. However, there is a theory that if you don't drink whole milk you won't use the calcium as efficiently because the fat is needed to process the calcium. The liquid protein is usually taken mixed with fruit juice, as a supplement that can be carried in lunch pails and drunk right after a workout. Body builders usually consume other supplements in addition to the liquid protein: a general all-vitamin and all-mineral pill is important, plus whatever extra B-complex, E and C you think you need. Dolomite provides more important minerals, and you may take brewer's yeast and liver in powder or pill form. Drink lots of liquids if you take liquid protein.

REST. People differ in their sleep requirement; whatever yours is, plan to add more hours of rest and sleep if you are going to work out. When you are working out, the muscles are tearing down. They are repaired and, hopefully, made more permanently bulging, while you rest. No rest, no muscle.

RIGHT EFFORT. After you break yourself in with light weights and just a few repetitions to get used to everything for two or three workouts, start putting in more effort. Whatever you do, do it until you can't move the muscle and it hurts. But don't hurt your tendons or joints. Make the muscle "burn" but stop short of straining tendons, which take forever to heal. Working the muscle is called pumping. Work it completely and don't cheat by using other muscles and body movements to help. Supposedly using heavier weights with fewer repetitions makes the muscles large, and using lighter weights with many repetitions carves it into a beautiful, articulate shape. If you need size, you probably should use the heavier weights eventually after you get used to things. Then you go back to lighter weights for the shaping.

The waiting time between sets (a set is the name for one effort of so many repetitions) should only be 45 seconds at the most, except for squats and bench presses when the waiting time can be a little longer. You must do at least four sets of an exercise to get results.

Work out three times a week--for instance either MWF or TTHS. But if you work every muscle properly, and even with the short waiting period between sets, this will take you well over three hours. I have split my workouts so that I do legs and stomach exercises on MWF and chest and arms on TTHS. If you start out on a three day a week schedule and do everything, you will eventually WANT to go every day because all this becomes a habit. Try it three days a week at first and then go to six. Also, you cannot expect to do as well on an exercise, say on a Thursday as you did on the previous Tuesday, so some of these workouts have to be somewhat lighter than others because of the repair time needed for the muscles.

HANDLING THE RESULTS: APPROVAL AND JEALOUSY. When you finally show results, be prepared for both approval and jealousy. No advantage or gift is without its price. People will like looking at you but you will begin to hear untruths about body building and be used. The untruths go like this: you are a narcissist and an exhibitionist (whatever they are). But so what? Define these terms positively for yourself and be the best narcissist or exhibitionist in town. You will get muscle bound and be unable to move flexibly. In truth, body builders are more flexible than others. "It" will all turn to fat if you quit. Don't quit. You'll only get fat if you eat wrong anyway.

Be prepared for being "used." Having a good looking body is a confidence builder and an entre' to people. But it is like having lots of money: do these people like you for your body (money) or for you as a whole? You may never know. There are body queens out there. But many people respond to others as a whole and not for any particular quality of body or personality that they have.

In November: Specific Routines

"... it would be sad if the gay audience does not support a show like this."

We have had a plethora of one man shows touring around the country in the last few years, and they all claim to be 'special evenings', but the 'most special' of them all so far is this one---Vincent Price as Oscar Wilde in "Diversions and Delights." The reasons that this evening is outstanding are numerous, but the two most obvious and most important factors should be praised---the character and the actor portraying that character.

First, Oscar Wilde is a key figure in both gay consciousness and in the world of art in general. He stands as a tragic example of what a repressed society will do to those who refuse to abide by its conventions, and both gays and all artists can appreciate that. And as a 'character', he was one of the best-fiendishly witty, lyrically poetic in his literary endeavors, snobbish and conceited, vain and insouciant, and so on ad infinitum with more adjectives than even Wilde could think of. So he is a natural for a one man show, as author John Gay must have known. Let Oscar Wilde speak to a modern audience as though he were speaking to an audience in Paris in the 1890's (after his prison sentence in England), and the wit and brilliance and conceit will speak for themselves. And this is precisely what happens.

Next, Vincent Price, as the actor portraying this scandalous character, is nothing short of outstanding. He captures both the light arrogant fun of Wilde's artistic nature as well as the tragedy inherent in the situation of an educated gay man in Victorian England. The bitterness that Wilde must have felt (as evident in his later writings) is perfectly focused by Price as a naughty, defiant attitude toward the audience, which, like his countrymen and friends at the time, cannot even imagine the horror of the prison term (two years) served by Wilde for 'immorality' (read HOMOSEXUALITY).

In these two crucial elements---the character portrayed and the actor portraying him---the play cannot be criticized. Nor can one find fault with the setting and lighting design, costuming, or direction, all of which were as outstanding as one would expect from the talented group of men involved with the production. But I fear that some gay people will be a little disappointed because Wilde is not presented as Oscar Wilde

The Homosexual, but instead as Oscar Wilde The Man, Artist, Dandy, and Homosexual. The play is not intended to make a radical point about homosexuality through the specific case of Wilde, but instead deals with homosexuality as it fits in with the art and life (and death) of Wilde. In this way, the play may be more helpful to the gay cause than is immediately evident, because it helps show that homosexuality is an integral part of a man's life and art, rather than an all-encompassing blight as certain Floridians would have us believe. And while it is all presented in a manner that is comprehensible to the general theatre-going public, it is not too watered down for even the most stringent Wilde scholars.

All around, "Diversions and Delights" offers quite a bit for everyone, and it would be sad if the gay audience does not support a show like this. In fact, it wouldn't be a bad idea to bring your parents or straight friends to see the show, because they're sure to enjoy it, and will probably have a little more compassion for the suffering of persecuted gays from any period in history. by Rick Rococo

".....after that it was a drag"

Vincent Price portrays Oscar Wilde in "Diversions and Delights" by (ironically enough) John Gay. This is a one man show staged as "an evening spent with Sebastian Melmouth on the 28th of November, 1899." Sebastian Melmouth is the name Oscar Wilde used for "The Ballad of Reading Gaol," written in 1898 after his release from prison. By using the name, Wilde was able to unite the traditions of a martyr and of one who had sold his soul to the devil. I felt like both during this performance.

The stage setting was well appointed and simple, as a concert stage in Paris, set up for an imaginary lecture by Oscar Wilde, in the last year of his life.

Vincent Price's entrance promised us a delightful evening as he appeared in eccentric costume and pasty complexion. He is obviously a defeated man who in his bitterness is still capable of a bitchy, biting commentary on the hypocritical world that eventually destroyed him. That promise was kept for the first 10 minutes of the performance. After that it was a drag.

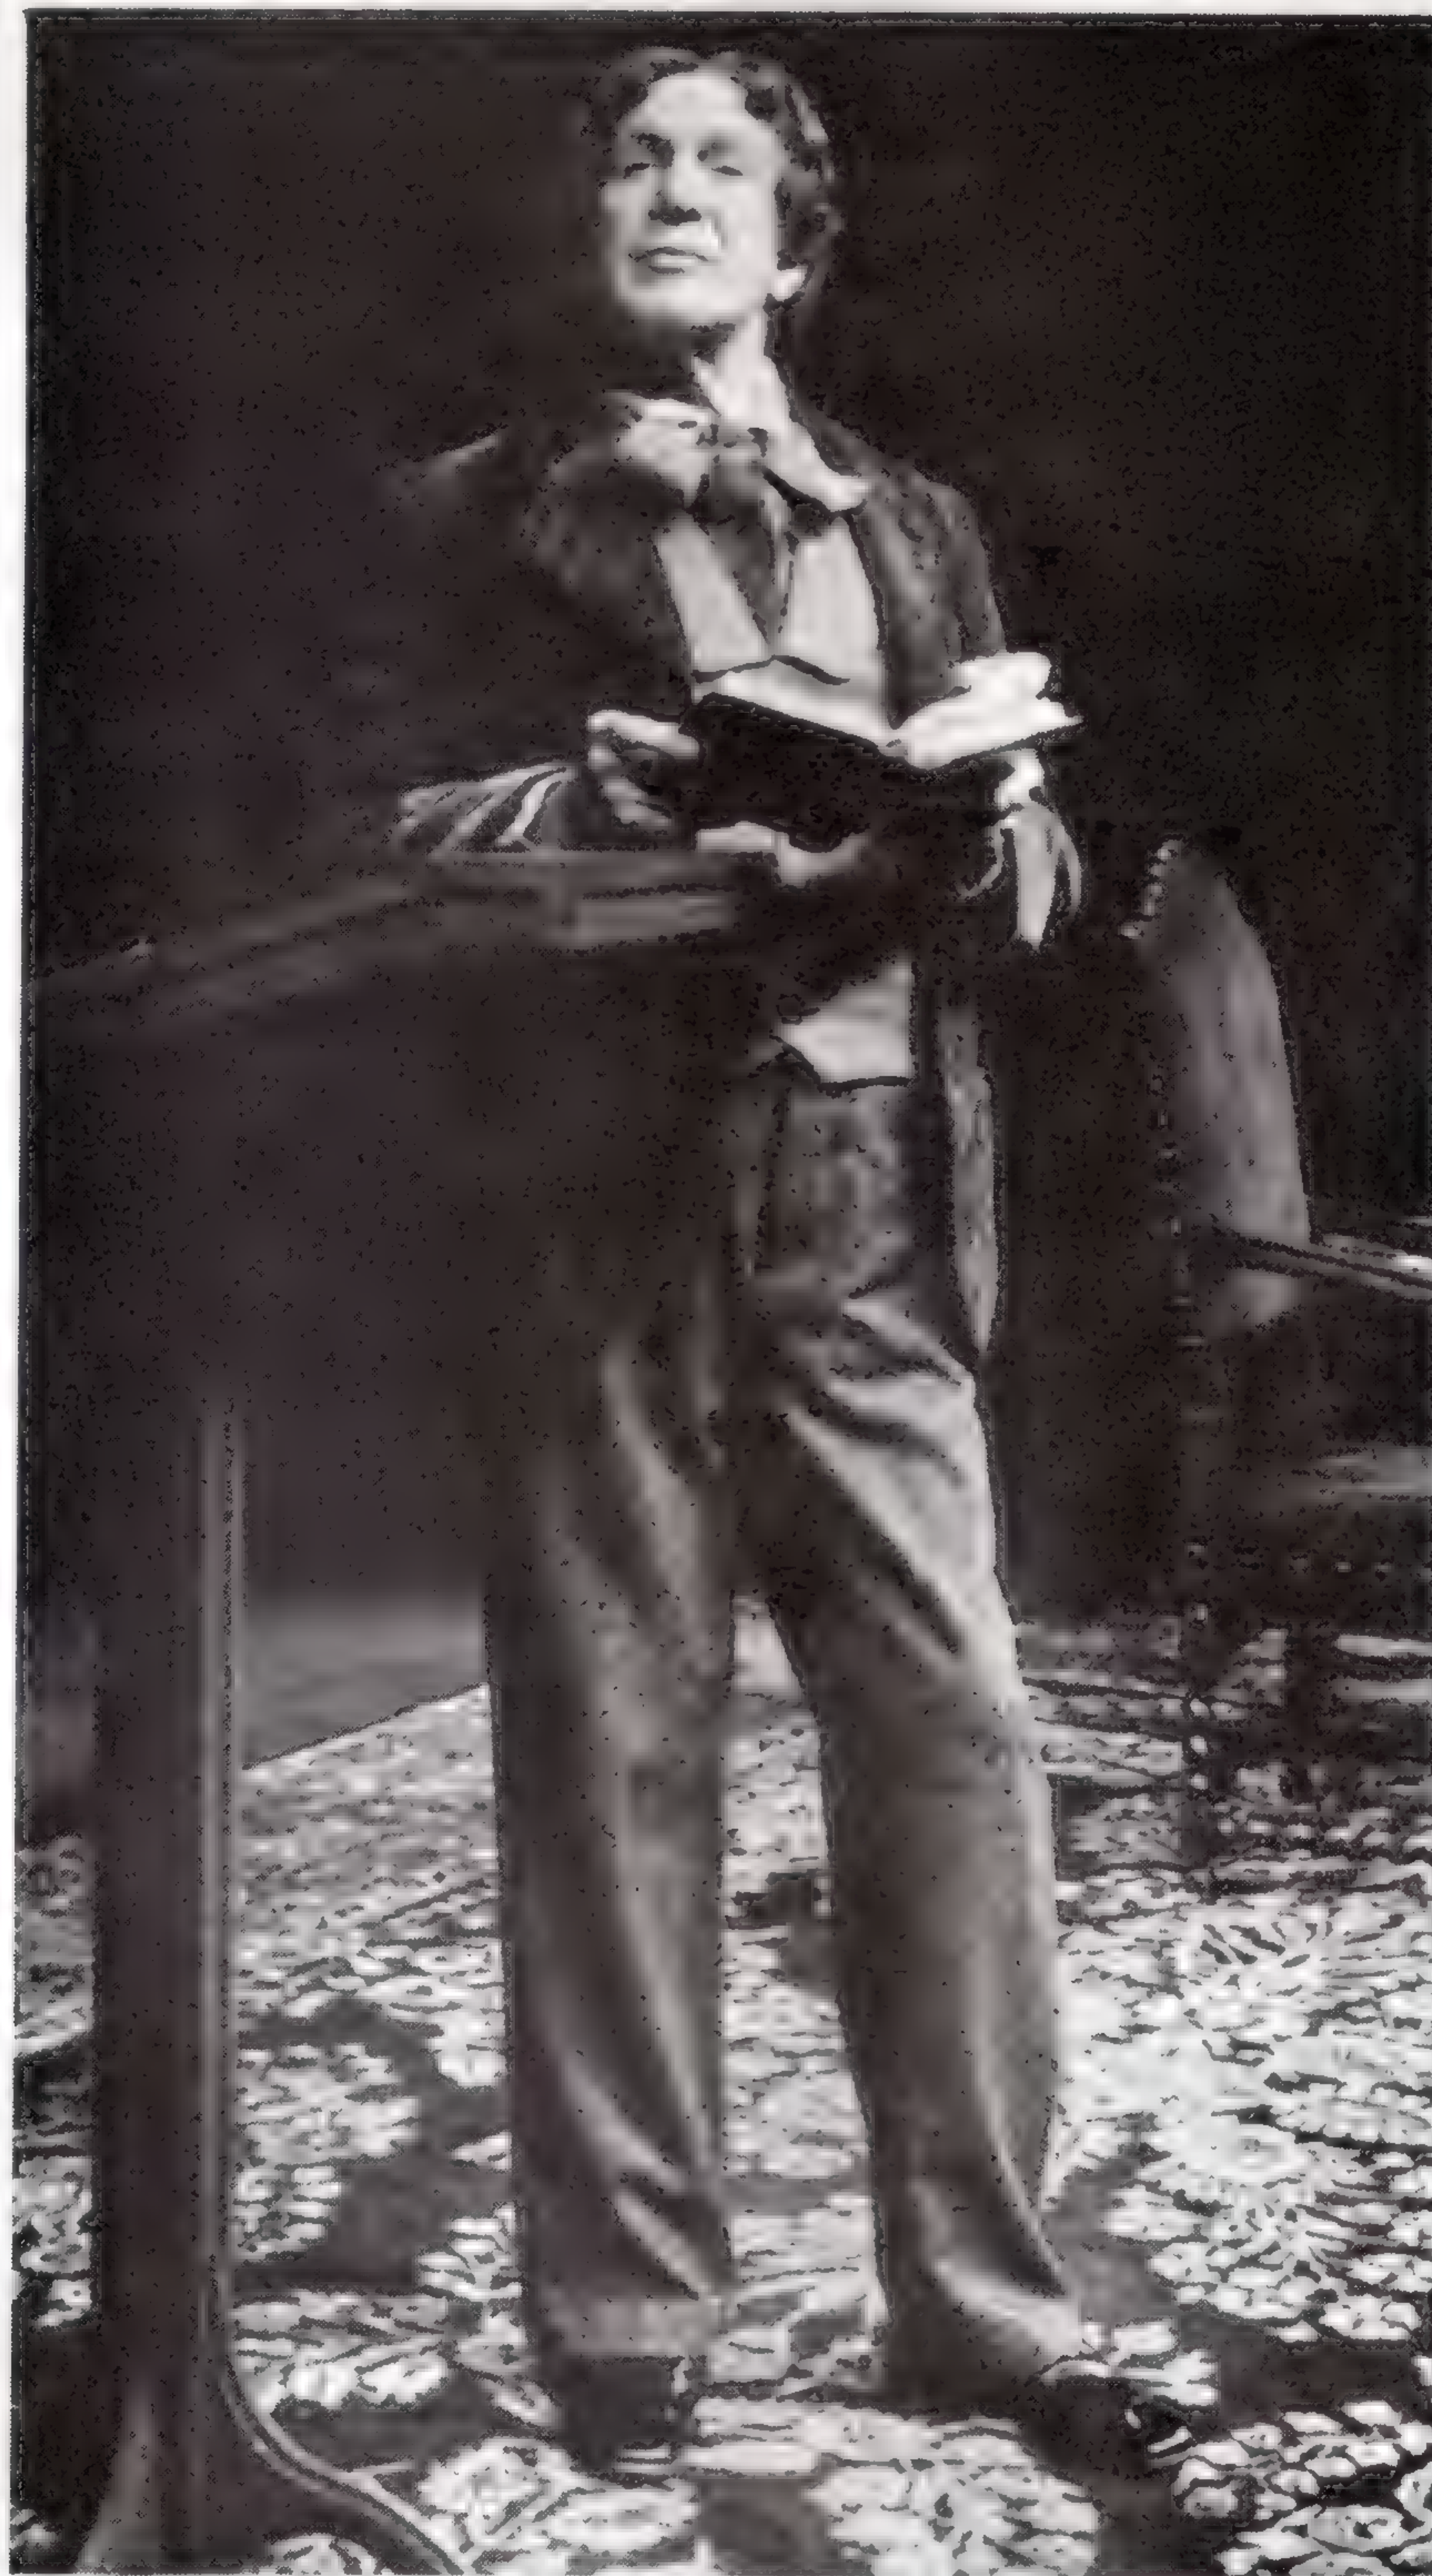

At one point, Mr. Price speaks of Wilde's critics. Listing, with amusement, all the things the critics have called him over the years, he was finally angered at one word: tedious. Unfortunately, that's exactly what the performance was. Tedious and patronizing. The wit of Oscar Wilde is spontaneous but every line coming from the stage seemed contrived. Even if you're not familiar with Wilde, you could almost second guess what was coming next.

Mr. Price is a fine actor and a skilled technician but as Oscar Wilde he appeared to be operating a machine he just wasn't familiar with. He's an educated man and I could see he enjoyed being Wilde and obviously he has a great deal of admiration for the man but I think he fails to truly appreciate Wilde's life. Rather than portraying Oscar Wilde, Price did an impersonation of him which left me with the feeling I was watching a drag show instead of a theatrical event.

The fault doesn't really lie with Mr. Price or his company. The fault lies with the fact that Oscar Wilde was a homosexual and Vincent Price is not. This fact showed through very strongly which made him appear similar to a white man doing black face. I would much prefer to hear Mr. Price do readings from Wilde. But to see him attempt to portray him embarrassed me. It's no wonder they're not getting much of a Gay audience. The non-Gays are amused because they are on the outside looking in, much like visiting a Gay bar to see what it is like. If the producers truly wanted a portrait of Oscar Wilde they should have engaged a Gay actor who could do him justice. I would have preferred to see someone like Richard Chamberlin or better yet, if it had been possible, the late Charles Laughton.

The one man show concept is still rather new to the theatre and in the past has proven to be exciting to both the performer and the audience. But with this concept, the burden lays solely with the performer, and no matter how skilled he may be, unless he can be one with the character, he's failed as an actor. "Diversions and Delights" fails in this regard. I'm not suggesting that the production be shelved. John Gay's script is excellent and Joseph Hardy's staging prevents the production from falling apart altogether but I hope if and when the play is produced again, more attention will be given to Oscar Wilde himself and not a pompous preoccupation with "The Importance of being 'OSCAR'." by Gene Janowski

TWO PERSPECTIVES ON AN EVENING WITH OSCAR WILDE

In a change from the standard entertainment page style of offering one critical opinion of a film or play, we've undertaken something different here because of the subject matter. "Diversions and Delights" is a one man show starring Vincent Price as Oscar Wilde, the noted gay literary personality who was persecuted for his homosexuality in Victorian England. For that reason, we're presenting two reviews of the play written from different perspectives: the first is a standard theatrical criticism written by an entertainment section staff member, while the second is a review written by a staff member who is well versed in gay politics and as such has taken a more militant gay stance. Of course, these two approaches are not mutually exclusive and both writers have certain overlapping ideas, but it becomes obvious that the more politically motivated reviewer finds fault with the treatment of Wilde's gayness, while the other review finds less fault with this element of the play. The reader is left to take both views into account before making any decisions about the play.

"... Price could win an Oscar for his Wilde show."

FOR ENTERTAINMENT

A PICTORIAL COMMENTARY ON SEXUALITY IN THE CINEMA

Part Two: The Gay Elements in American Cinema

Coming Next Issue — Part Three: 'The Bitch' or Tough Women in the Movies

(LEFT) Beryl Reid is the aging lesbian 'Sister George' who is about to be written out of her television show, in the KILLING OF SISTER GEORGE. (RIGHT) Liza Minnelli, shown here in TELL ME THAT YOU LOVE ME JUNIE MOON, often played opposite gay characters in her films. In that film, one of the three leads was gay, and in CABARET she was romantically attached to a bisexual man (Michael York). Also, she was involved in a menage a trois of sorts with Burt Reynolds and Gene Hackman in LUCKY LADY. (BELOW LEFT) Sitting in the hand of her hairy friend with his suggestively placed finger, Jessica Lange stars in the 1977 version of KING KONG. The references to interspecies sexuality are a little too obvious, but at least at the end, the girl and guy don't get together--she was holding out for the ape. (BELOW RIGHT) Jerry Stiller (center, moustache) in the rather unfunny version of THE RITZ. While the stage play was funny and clever in its use of the gay baths setting, the movie tended to homogenize and pasteurize much of the gay humor for the sake of middle American movie tastes.

Ralph Paul's LIFESTYLE

HOME SWEET HOMO. . . . Tabulating the results of our mail in survey in both Gay Chicago News (free newspaper distributed in the bars) and GCNews/Journal (here in your hot little hands) we have found that our readers are a fairly contented lot with the place that they live. Our survey entitled "Where you Live" varied only slightly in response to the majority of the questions between the two publications. The most notable difference was a much higher percentage of the magazine respondents considered their current residence home (97% as compared to 83%). Surveys can be interpreted in many ways and it was pointed out that only the more content 'homebody' type would be inclined to take the time to fill out the survey. Be this as it may, the demographic results indicated quite a cross section in age, income, education, occupation, political and religious beliefs. However, it was quite obvious that those reading and responding were 'gay, white, males.' Under 2% were tabulated to be either bi-sexual, female or black. It was almost a 50-50 deal on being publicly or privately gay (53% openly gay). Results are still coming in so we'll report further finding later.

ONE YEAR IN EXILE. . . . Mother Carol, always ready to flip her wig, is this month marking her first year in exile at the 3510 North Broadway location. Carol calls Columbus Day (Oct. 10th) the day that her large following of friends found out that Broadway could be gay. The weekend of fun will include a costume party on Sunday and a Buffet on Monday. Congratulations, Mother and keep hanging in there!

PUNKS ON HALSTED. . . . Swinging from a try at being a gay disco the La Mere Vipere has become the headline Punk Rock Palace for the Windy City. Punks I've been told have no sexual preference but it is attracting many curious about the new wave. Live entertainment at the Vipere not only includes the dancers but the premier of a talent calling himself Beluga. Promoted by an editor of Oui the character is really 20 year-old Michael Cegur from Hammond, Indiana. The press release said that Mike started his career at Dugan's Bistro in the coat room. Look where he is now! Somewhere there is a lesson for aspiring talent.

SHOW OF SHOWS. . . . The end of October brings out the beauty and beast of everyone that is gay. One of the highlights of the season is Felicia's "Costumes on Review" to be held again at McCormick Place. Felicia who holds forth between being himself at the Redoubt and being on stage at the Baton Show Lounge keeps the stage alive with a troupe of regulars featuring such bare chested male talent as Jan Howard. This year, once again the Baton regulars will be on stage for the 'Review' which was won last year by full feathered Ken Gonella. We may even have another bowling exhibition from a poor loser.

GETTIN' IT ALL TOGETHER. . . . Harry Shattuck is in the early stages of getting his dance troupe show on the road. The new group under the headline of "Z" New Co. opened out of town in Ft. Wayne. Rehearsals continue for the group headquartered out of the El Dorado on North Halsted. It's nice to know that a new crop of sexy dancers come out every season. Harry, one of our first nude models, has promised that we will get a better look at the boys soon! Coughlin keep the camera handy.

LOOP DE LOOPS. A great idea of intercity hospitality has been born in Milwaukee with a new group headed by 'Mother' Kristal. Known as the "Fruit Loops" the aim is to link the cities of Chicago and Milwaukee in friendship. There is no doubt that their clever new logo will be seen more and more in these parts. However, a note of caution: travel through Lake County (IL) as quick as possible if you expose your gayness. COMING ATTRACTIONS. . . Next month somehow we'll be celebrating our first anniversary. We plan to do it with (of all things) a special anniversary issue and maybe even a combination birthday party for Gloria James. (Nov. 19th, in case you want to send gifts or money).
